FRENCH AND BRITISH ARE DEADLOCKED

Disarmament Now Recognized to Be Political Matter and Not One for Technicians

DELEGATES FACE TO FACE WITH FAILURE

Three-Power Treaty May Yet Be Saved and Is Regarded as One Sure Thing of Parley

(Associated Press)

LONDON, March 29.—As the tenth week of the London naval negotiations closes, the fact that disarmament is fundamentally a political rather than a technical problem is increasingly impressed upon the delegates.

Mr. Hon. Arthur Henderson and Mr. Aristide Briand, British and French Foreign Ministers, and their experts were bearing the burden of work, while Prime Minister MacDonald and the other chief delegates enjoy a brief week-end holiday.

HUNTING FOR FORMULA

Mr. Henderson and Mr. Briand conferred three hours today, and, in an effort to report progress by Monday, will continue tomorrow in search for a formula giving interpretation to the League of Nations Covenant which France can view as bolstering her national security in the Mediterranean and at the same time does not increase Great Britain's military commitments.

So far, reports here indicate, the experts have made little progress in their formula hunt. But if they succeed, the world can be standardized, limited and reduced under plans which have been worked out in the two months here and can be put into force at once.

FACING FAILURE

Inability to settle international political issues, affecting principally Great Britain, France and Italy, brings the conference face to face with the spectre of failure to accomplish, in any large degree, the

Majority Passes First Budget of New Legislature

(Canadian Press)

REGINA, Sask., March 29.—By a majority of four, the Saskatchewan budget was approved by the Legislature late last night. The vote was 27 to 23. Estimates now go to the committee of supply for consideration. Mr. J. G. Gardiner, former Premier, deplored the "orgy of expenditure" by the present administration which, he said, would add $1,000,000 to the public debt of Saskatchewan.

WHEAT TO BE STILL GROWN IN THE WEST

But Agricultural Expert Says Mixed Farming Will Be Developed Largely in Future

NINETY PER CENT OF CROP IN HAND

(Canadian Press)

OTTAWA, March 29.—Western Canada will not be driven out of wheat growing by the present wheat situation, though there will be a tendency to larger farms and more mixed farming, Mr. George F. Chipman, of Winnipeg, told the Canadian Club here today.

FARMERS KEPT TO WHEAT

Western farming was already getting on a basis of permanency but high wheat prices in recent years had led farmers to concentrate on this crop more than they would otherwise have done.

Mr. Chipman said that the wheat crop in Canada and the United States reports indicated less production in Australia and the Argentine pointed to a high price for wheat.

"But while the world crop in 1929 was smaller than in 1928 it was larger than the five-year average from 1924 to 1928, and Europe produced two large crops in 1928 and 1929. In both years production was

WHEAT POOL IN AUSTRALIA NOT FELT ASSURED

Refusal of Tasmania to Accept Proposal or Assist Scheme Means Serious Setback

FARMERS OPPOSED WILL TAKE ACTION

(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters)

CANBERRA, Australia, March 29.—Australia's proposed wheat marketing pool under Government auspices received a setback yesterday when one of the six state Governments, the Government of Tasmania, informed the Commonwealth Government that Tasmania would not join the pool.

The full effect of Tasmania's defection cannot be known until official advice has been received from the remaining Governments, though it is believed most of the states are willing to join the pool. Premier McPherson, of Tasmania, said that state would neither join the pool, arrange the guarantee of about $1 per bushel of wheat, nor accept joint responsibility for possible loss.

WITH GOVERNMENT AID

The scheme of a compulsory wheat marketing pool, acting under a Federal board with boards in each state, based on a Federal guarantee of $1 per bushel for wheat at country sidings, was put forward at a

FINAL PART OF CABLE IS IN POSITION

Exceptional Features of Telephone Connection Almost Complete Now With Mainland

IS FOURTH IN GULF OF GEORGIA

By the laying Friday of the fifth and principal submarine section of the B.C. Telephone Company's direct cable to Victoria, by the cableship Brisco, a new link of seventy-three miles is completed. It is expected the new route will be in service in the late Spring.

The work of the last section (about fifteen miles) consisted in laying 80,000 feet, weighing 253 tons, of cable which had arrived last week from the Old Country. The section was from Mayne Island to Point Roberts.

THE ROUTE

An aerial toll cable extends from Vancouver (Seymour Exchange) to the North Arm of the Fraser River. The North Arm of the Fraser River has been crossed at the Fraser Avenue Bridge by a submarine section, and then the aerial cable travels Lulu Island, on Numbul, Five Road to Woodward's Landing. Submarine cable has been laid across the South Arm of the Fraser

SIXTEEN MEN ARE TRAPPED IN BIG MINE

Explosion Entombs Them in Workings Mile and Half From Main Shaft of Mine

FEARED HELP WILL NOT BE POSSIBLE

(Associated Press)

KETTLE ISLAND, Ky., March 29.—Sixteen men were trapped by an explosion a mile and a half back from the hills in a coal mine here late today, and rescue workers after several hours' work had almost abandoned hope they are alive.

The explosion was believed to have been caused by dust.

Rescue efforts were taken charge of late tonight by a party of experts who arrived from Lexington. Word from the local workers was that they had penetrated 2,500 feet into the mine by the main shaft, but believed they had more than a mile to go to reach the entombed men.

Ex-Kaiser William, of Doorn, Suing Newspaperman for Libel

(Copyright, 1929, by The Chicago Daily News Foreign Service.)

BERLIN, Germany, March 29.—The next case in a charge of libel brought by William, Prince of Prussia, against the newspaperman, Ewald Mendel, responsible editor of The Berlin Morgenpost. So spoke the clerk of the Berlin Mitte Court yesterday.

For the William, Prince of Prussia, mentioned in none other than William of Hohenzollern, one-time Emperor of Germany and King of Prussia, since 1918 holding court on a somewhat reduced scale in Doorn, Holland. His ex-Majesty had first endeavored to sue in the name of "Formerly ruling Emperor and King William the Second," but the court did not recognize any such, and the name was given.

Difficulties further arose concerning the power of attorney given by William to Col. Leopold von Kleist, but these difficulties apparently will be cleared and two weeks from yesterday the lawsuit will be heard in Berlin.

Interesting are the grounds of the charge. The Berlin Morgenpost on October 24 last year published an article which stated that the German field guns in the world war were inferior to the enemy guns, notably the French, because they were almost exclusively the product of Krupp. The Kaiser, it was stated, was a pettifogger, and after each competitive test the German army generals were forced to choose the Krupp model 75-millimetre cannon, although the guns produced by competitors, Ehrhardt and Thyssen, were better, in order to produce dividends for his Majesty. His ex-Majesty's annoyance is therefore explicable.

NEW GERMAN CABINET IS NATIONALIST

Dr. Bruening Forms Government After Considerable Wrangling Among Parties

SOME OF PREVIOUS MINISTRY REMAIN

Administration of Conservative Leanings Will Supersede That of Socialists

BERLIN, March 29.—After more interparty wrangling than had been at first expected, Dr. Heinrich Bruening, Centrist party leader in the Reichstag, today got together a new Coalition Government to succeed that of Heinrich Mueller, who resigned this week.

The list of ministers submitted by the new Chancellor to President von Hindenburg, Germany's aged but sturdy leader, who took a prominent part in the ministerial negotiations, shows a definite shift toward the Right of the Reichstag. This was inevitable after the withdrawal of the Social Democrats.

MAINLY NATIONALIST

Though the political centre of gravity in the Government now is nearer the Nationalists, the return of Dr. Julius Curtius as the Minister of Foreign Affairs gave assurance that Germany's foreign policy would not be changed from that inaugurated by the late Gustave Stresemann, and effort was made to oust him in an attempt to placate the Nationalists, but President von Hindenburg himself put a stop to it.

In addition to Chancellor Bruening, there are only three new faces in Germany's new Government. All the other ministers served with ex-Chancellor Mueller.

Would Overthrow Tax Rate of All Washington Rys.

SPOKANE, March 29.—The entire railroad tax rate structure of Washington would be overthrown through recommendations made today by Judge J. Stanley Webster here today by Judge Ralph Kaufman, of Ellensburg, as special master in the railroad tax suit.

Judge Kaufman recommended refunds to the Northern Pacific, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, and Spokane, Portland & Seattle railroads totaling $2,287,000, covering what he said were overassessments for the years 1926 and 1927.

The recommendations, if accepted by Judge Webster, will affect tax payments of 1928 and 1929, and will stand as a guide in future assessments of railroads.

Enterprise Need Of Gt. Britain Says Mr. Ford

(Associated Press)

LONDON, March 29.—The Spectator today published an interview with Mr. Henry Ford, in which the automobile manufacturer makes answer to the question, "What is wrong with British industry?"

Mr. Ford is quoted as declaring that what it needs to save it is the birth of a new spirit of enterprise and initiative among its leaders, and higher industrial wages would give that new stimulus immediately.

The main trouble with industry everywhere," Mr. Ford said, "is that leaders of industry don't properly interpret their difficulties as notices to change their methods."

Gun Battle When Bandits Hold Up Laundry Office

(Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 29.—Three bandits and a policeman fought with pistols and shotguns in the office of a laundry here today, when the bandits held up and robbed the place of an undetermined amount of money and escaped. Twenty-five women were thrown into a panic.

Policeman Basile Economides, who was on guard at the plant during the pay hour, whipped out his pistol and blazed away. One of the bandits fell to the floor and his companions opened fire on the policeman with sawed-off shotguns.

Work Begins on New Unit at Solarium

A BEGINNING on the foundations of the new $30,000 Shrine unit of the Queen Alexandra Solarium with the idea of having the corner stone laying by the Shrine on or about May 10. The above drawing by the architect, Capt. Ralph Berrill, A.R.I.B.A., indicates the character of the projected building, which will eventually constitute a completely independent unit of the Solarium, with the exception that the culinary operations will continue to be carried out in the present kitchen. Above the basement are seen the windows of the main ward, which will accommodate fifteen beds. This floor is to be finished immediately and will contain the ward, bathrooms, waiting-rooms, night nurses' room and kitchenette. The upstairs, which will be left unfinished for the present, will eventually house the domestic staff at present accommodated in "The Chalet." Ultimately the new building will also contain the central heating plant, the boiler and fuel rooms, the main kitchen, pantry and refrigerator, as any further addition to the Solarium will throw the Shrine unit into the central position in the group.

Grave Issues Are Facing Ireland Now Confronting Struggle of Much Import

(Associated Press)

DUBLIN, March 29.—After eight years of life as a separate Dominion in the British Commonwealth of Nations, the Irish Free State finds itself facing three major problems. The first is the political situation. The Cabinet which has been headed for eight years by President William T. Cosgrave, has been forced to resign after being defeated on its opposition to old age pensions, and the Republican extremists are still not pacified.

The secret and illegal Irish Republican Army is still in existence. Mr. Cosgrave may be chosen again by the Dail Eireann, but has a strong opponent in Eamon de Valera, Republican leader.

The next most serious problem is that of the alarming depopulation. Since the Irish Free State is primarily an agricultural country, the seriousness of depopulation becomes patent.

The third problem is that of the Free State's growing adverse trade balance. Last trade figures show that external trade of the Irish Free State increased greatly during the last twelve months, but the imports increased to a much greater degree.

Trade and political problems can be worked out by patriots of whatever political persuasion, but the

Performer of Circus Falls To His Death

NEW YORK, March 29.—Hans Jahn, thirty-five-year-old German performer, was killed tonight in a ring of the Ringling Bros.' circus in the Bronx when he lost his balance and fell from the top of a forty-foot pole, held on the shoulder of his brother, Karl.

Karl, seeing that his brother was about to fall, ran forward and threw himself on the ground as a cushion for Hans, but the latter's back was broken and his skull probably fractured. He died instantly.

Hans was known as a "percher," He had climbed to the top of the pole, balanced on Karl's shoulder, and went through various acrobatic feats. Suddenly he lost his balance, but recovered it sufficiently to grasp the pole again ten feet from the top. The wrenching made Karl lose control of the pole below and it fell from his shoulders.

Hans Jahn's wife and two children were in the brother's dressing room with Karl when the time Hans was killed.

BODIES NOT FOUND

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C., March 29.—Despite three days' search no sign has been seen of the bodies of four power company employees drowned in Falls River Wednesday.

C.P.R. Fireman and Hero of Disaster at Coquihalla Pass Is Killed

MERRITT, March 29.—Robert Barwick, twenty-seven, Kettle Valley Railway fireman, and hero of the train wreck in the Coquihalla Pass four years ago, died in the hospital here of injuries received when his engine was swept from the track near Juliet on Friday afternoon.

The train was proceeding slowly westward when huge boulders came hurtling down the mountainside and the engine was swept from the rails. It rolled over and over down the embankment, and when it came to rest at the edge of the river Barwick was pinned underneath. Scalding steam and boiling water from the boiler added to the terrible agony of the unfortunate young man, who was in that terrible position nearly three-quarters of an hour before he could be extricated. A special train rushed with all speed to Merritt, his home town, but he died in about an hour after reaching the hospital.

Engineer MacLellan and Brakeman Millard are in the hospital suffering from shock and minor injuries.

In the Coquihalla Pass disaster, which occurred four years ago and in which a whole train was wrecked and twelve men killed, it was Barwick who, as the doomed freight was racing to its destruction, crept out in front of the rear engine and pulled up the engine and caboose and saved the lives of four men.

He leaves a father and mother, a sister, Mrs. George Riley, and two brothers, Stanley and Melvin, all of Merritt.

CHOICE MADE AS HEAD OF B.C. SURVEYS

Mr. F. C. Green Will Be Appointed Surveyor-General of B.C.—Succeeds Late Mr. Umbach

WIDE EXPERIENCE IN PROFESSION

Has Been Leader in Both Surveying and Engineering Professions for Many Years

MR. F. C. Green is to be appointed to the position of surveyor-general of the province to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. J. E. Umbach a few weeks ago. It is anticipated that announcement of the appointment will follow early this week. The new appointee stands at the head of his profession in the province of British Columbia and is not only most favorably known to the members of his own profession, but is also held in high esteem by the general public.

For over thirty years he has been very actively engaged in the province in various branches of the land surveying and engineering professions. He knows this province thoroughly, and therefore comes to his new office admirably equipped in every way to fill the duties of the position.

For some little time Mr. Green has been resident in Victoria, where he carries on the work of a consulting engineer.

Mr. A. S. G. Macgrange, secretary of the Corporation of B.C. Land Surveyors, speaking for the organization, paid the following tribute to the work of Mr. Green and his fitness for the office.

"The announcement of the prospective appointment of Mr. F. C. Green as surveyor-general to fill the vacancy created by the untimely death of the late Mr. J. E. Umbach, Continued on Page 2, Column 5

FRENCH GIVE APPROVAL TO YOUNG PLAN

Passes Chamber of Deputies by Large Majority Which Will Mean Its Ratification

M. TARDIEU PILOTS MEASURE THROUGH

(Associated Press)

PARIS, March 29.—After three days of discussion the French Chamber of Deputies tonight approved the Young Plan elaborated by the experts of the United States and the great European powers in Paris last Spring and finally approved by the Hague conference. The deputies approved the plan by the overwhelming vote of 530 to 55.

This practically means the acceptance of the plan already agreed upon by the German Reichstag, proved by the German Reichstag, by France. Little opposition is expected in the Senate.

An agreement with Germany regarding the occupation of Rhineland was also voted. The final outcome of the voting on both measures was never in doubt during the debate, which was directed for the Government by Premier Andre Tardieu.

Making vigorous appeal to the deputies, M. Tardieu asked for unanimity in approving the Young Plan legislation so that the world might understand that France was united in her foreign policies. He failed to get a unanimous vote, but rallied support from all quarters except the extreme Right and the extreme Left.

Several hundred young Royalists of the "Action Franciste" made a hostile manifestation in front of the Chamber of Deputies in the evening, shouting against the Young Plan. They were quickly dispersed by police.

CONFERENCE UPON BILL IS DELAYED

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, D.C., March 29.—House Republican leaders failed again today to agree upon a programme for sending the Tariff Bill to conference, and will meet again on Monday in an effort to satisfy various party groups desiring separate votes on three of four controversial provisions.

Speaker Longworth said after the meeting that there still was a possibility of getting the bill to conference with the Senate by Tuesday.

objectives for which the Five Power Conference was convened. But all the spokesmen join in saying that never could the long weeks of work here be written down as a total loss, for while some technical work done here might have to await political agreement, the advances would not be scrapped. Instead, they would be applied where the political aspects of disarmament have been settled—as, for instance, between Great Britain and the United States; and also Japan, assuming that the Tokyo Government finally approves the tentative three-power agreement which has been reached here.

MORE DISCOURAGEMENT

There is some discouragement reported from the French-British negotiations, but the three-power treaty always remains as a safe and sure escape for Great Britain, the United States and Japan—whose delegates, after all, consider that a tri-partite agreement would be a great achievement.

Should the French-British parley take a more hopeful turn, with France receiving sufficient Mediterranean security guarantees to reduce her naval strength figures, then the American delegation would be able to join another political arrangement as an aid to disarmament—a five-power consultative pact which would have the full backing of President Hoover.

The confusion which existed in the British press as to whether the London delegation of the United States and the Government at Washington were in agreement on the proposed consultative treaty was dispelled today with the authoritative assurance that President Hoover approves the policy Secretary Stimson and his colleagues have adopted in the European political barriers can be lowered.

FINAL PART
IN POSITION

River near Ladner, and aerial cable continues to Point Roberts, which forms the northern promontory of Boundary Bay. The distance from Vancouver to Point Roberts is 24.6 miles.

Submarine cable extends from Point Roberts to Mayne Island, 12.3 miles away, and aerial cable carries the circuit across the island, a distance of 4.4 miles. Submarine cable 12.3 miles long connects Mayne Island with Swartz Bay, at the tip of Saanich Peninsula, and the aerial cable reaches from that point to Victoria, 20.6 miles distant.

ROUTES HITHERTO

Hitherto there have been two submarine cables between Point Grey and Nanaimo, while another, laid early in 1927, lies between Point Grey and the Saanich Peninsula, via Galiano and Salt Spring Islands, giving a fairly direct route to Victoria from Vancouver.

UNDERWATER LINKS

Three and a half hours after the Brico left Mayne Island on February 15 it reached Swartz Bay, Saanich Peninsula, with approximately twelve miles of telephone cable laid down on the ocean floor. The first submarine section of the new transatlantic cable was thus laid in record time, without a mishap.

OTHER SECTIONS

Two other underwater links in the new Vancouver-Victoria line, in addition to the Mayne Island-Swartz Bay section, have been laid since the Fraser job. Three hundred and fifty feet of submarine cable was laid across False Creek, beneath the draw across Connaught Bridge, Vancouver, and another cable was laid across the North Arm of the Fraser, the line being placed fifty feet south of the existing bridge at the foot of Fraser Street in anticipation of the building of a new bridge.

UNUSUAL FEATURES

There are many technical points about the new cable that are difficult for laymen to understand. But one of the most interesting features in connection with it is the fact that while the first cable laid across the Gulf of Georgia weighed 100 pounds to the mile, the new one, by absence of "continuous loading," weighs only twenty pounds to the mile. Another unusual feature is that some conductors will be arranged for the usual two-wire operation and others for four-wire service. This enables repeater to amplify voice currents to a higher degree than would be otherwise possible. There are nine of these four-talking circuits, which will provide high grade service, able to operate with clarity under the most difficult conditions.

Three repeaters on the line will allow sufficient amplification of voice currents to provide unusually clear speaking channels, while location of service by land and sea connections will be made virtually impossible because of well-cleared right-of-way sections traversed by the short land lines of the new link.

Another unusual feature of the new cable will be that some conductors will be arranged for the usual two-wire operation and others for four-wire operation. An interesting service which has been developed because of the few available telephone lines across the Gulf is the "ghost circuit," first installed commercially in British Columbia. Designed theoretically and technically by the British postoffice, it is the Franco-British line, it was never put in use. Engineers of the B.C. Telephone Company developed the principle to provide additional service on the Gulf cables. This has been of considerable use to the company and has been studied intensively by engineers for adoption to their needs.

Thirty pairs of conductors, providing thirty-six speech paths, compared with the total of twelve given by the existing three cables, will be available.

China. This investigation threw great light on the little known cities of Central Asia, and the various populations which from time to time occupied the walled cities, until the all-enveloping sand encompassed them. Tablets were discovered in Sanskrit, Chinese, Tibetan and the Brahmi script of Khotan (an ancient kingdom) and an important archaeological collection made. Evidence back to the close of the second century A.D. was obtained, and proof of a commercial traffic from Western Asia by caravan routes. For this work he received the Royal Geographical Society's gold medal, and in 1910 transferred to the Archaeological Survey. He carried out further explorations in Central Asia and Persia in 1913 to 1916, and received further distinctions. In 1926 he continued his investigations in the Upper Swat area and Baluchistan, and added considerably to the knowledge of that area.

Sir Aurel has published many volumes dealing with Central Asia, and maps of Chinese Turkestan and Kansu.

Fishermen Will Not Fish Unless
Rate Is Changed

VANCOUVER, March 29.—Piled-up fishermen will not fish this year unless a flat rate of $4 a ton is established by reduction plant owners, according to Mr. W. Oram, Fishermen's Protective Association.

Mr. Oram contends the sliding scale adopted by owners, ranging from $3.50 per ton for catches over 500 tons, to $4.50 per ton for catches under 500 tons, is unsatisfactory. Small catches are usual, while catches, which command the high price, are rare.

An attempt to reach an agreement between the two bodies will be made on Monday night when plant proprietors will attend a meeting of the British Columbia Protective Association, Mr. Oram states.

SIXTEEN MEN ARE TRAPPED

They said the farther they went the harder the work, as they had to rebuild ventilating shafts or brattices leading short intervals from the main shaft to a ventilating shaft that parallels the latter.

The slight chance that the trapped men stood is that they might have been able to work their way into some unused shaft and protect themselves from the bad air by preparing brattices that were only slightly damaged.

The explosion scattered debris in the shaft, adding to the difficulties of rescue.

Lawrence Kuhn, a mining engineer, led a party of four men into the shaft to investigate early tonight and they were barely able to escape because of the black damp. They had no gas masks and were revived with difficulty.

Wage Dispute in Australia Is to Be Settled Soon

(Associated Press)

SYDNEY, N.S.W., March 29.—Coal owners and miners in the New South Wales fields, which have been partly closed for many months through wage disputes, have been finally drawn together by Prime Minister James Scullin.

The Premier asked them to discuss the position frankly, and emphasized that the dispute not only affected the population of Australia but was seriously affecting her credit.

The conference decided to put certain proposals before the respective owners' and miners' organizations. It is generally expected the miners will resume work on terms put forward by the owners some months ago, but rejected by the workers at that time.

NEW GERMAN

Interior in 1925, and of Agriculture in 1927, will have the agriculture post in the Brüning coalition. His inclusion, even without the assurance of support from his followers in the agrarian wing of the Nationalist party, is regarded as an important tactical victory for the Chancellor.

The other two changes from the Müller Cabinet are Johannes Breit, who takes the Ministry of Justice, and Gottfried Treviranus, who will serve as Minister without portfolio.

There are now four Centrists, two Populists and one representative apiece from the Democrats, People's Conservative party, Nationalist, Bavarians and the Economic party.

Dr. Curtius, General Wilhelm Greener, and George Schwartzel were taken over from the Müller coalition with the same posts, and an official correction to the Cabinet list as originally published tonight stated that Dr. Paul Meidenbauer would continue to have the Ministry of Finance, instead of Hermann Dietrich. Herr Dietrich will remain at the Ministry of Economics.

Chancellor Brüning is credited with great diplomatic cleverness in making to satisfy the friends of the conservative Treviranus, who was commander of a torpedo boat during the war and has been identified with the Nationalists, without giving him either the Ministry of Foreign Affairs or the Ministry of the Interior.

For a time it was feared that the Chancellor would have to throw Dr. Curtius overboard in favor of Herr Treviranus, which would have been particularly embarrassing, because Treviranus voted against Germany's acceptance of the Young plan. He also voted against the law for the protection of the Republic, which would have made his position anomalous at the Ministry of the Interior.

WHEAT TO BE

IN THE WEST

200,000,000 bushels above the five-year average. Then there was an exceptionally heavy crop of rye, corn and potatoes.

CROP UNDERESTIMATED

It then became clear, Mr. Chipman said, that the crop of the world had been underestimated and the demand overestimated. Added to this was the depression in practically all European countries except France, which curtailed buying power and the tendency of these countries to restrict imports and exports for home production.

It was an absurdity, the speaker declared, to attribute the situation to resentment in Great Britain and Europe over the pool system of selling wheat in Canada. Undoubtedly, there was some resentment, but the extent and effect of it had been exaggerated.

90 PER CENT IN HAND

The future was uncertain, he continued. Canada still had 90 per cent of last year's crop in hand, and although recent reports were that it was moving a little more freely, there was no clear indication the situation would be cleared up before the end of July, when the crop year ends. They knew there was plenty of wheat in sight and so were content to live from hand to mouth. The size of the winter wheat crop in the United States was another factor.

Canadian wheat in stock, however, was of better quality than any other large body of wheat in the world, and any improvement in demand would benefit Canada first.

Prince Nicholas
Takes Law Into
His Own Hands

(Associated Press)

BUCHAREST, Rumania, March 29.—Much comment has been aroused here by the action of the co-regent Prince Nicholas, who took it upon himself in a street of the capital to sentence Major Georgesu to three weeks' confinement to his home and a subsequent apology to the prince after a traffic incident.

Prince Nicholas, it was said, was driving recklessly through the street and nearly ran over Major Georgesu. The major, highly indignant and not recognizing the prince, smashed the windshield with his cane. Nicholas thereupon assumed the role of judge on the spot and dictated the sentence.

NEED OF NEW COURTHOUSE

The people of this community have been led to take it for granted that a new courthouse will be erected here by the Provincial Government during the present year. The money is available through the Public Works loan sanctioned during the past session of the Legislature. Public opinion is a unit in the belief that the present courthouse has outlived its usefulness. It is a building falling into a state of desuetude; it is musty and unhealthy, with quarters too congested for the transaction of court work. The fact is that the condition of deterioration into which it has been permitted to fall is a standing reflection on the facilities for the administration of justice provided in the capital of British Columbia.

Judges, members of the Bar, all litigants and the public generally have complained in no uncertain terms of the imperative need of a new courthouse. Both Vancouver and Prince Rupert have been admirably provided in this respect. Between $400,000 and $500,000 was spent on a courthouse at the latter place although there are not nearly so many cases coming up for trial at that point as in Victoria. The question was raised during the course of the late session of the Legislature. The Government is fully aware of the need and it has an obvious duty in the proper conduct of law administration, as well as to the citizens of Victoria, to provide the new structure which has been urged for so many years. The members for Victoria in the Legislature have been strongly insistent for a long time past on the urgent need of a new courthouse. They are as aware as the citizens are of how governmental prestige suffers where a policy of procrastination is pursued.

SAANICH TAX REDUCTION

There is a note of particular satisfaction in times like these that Saanich Municipality has been able to effect a reduction of two mills in its taxation rate. This has been made possible, in part at least, by the fact that the Provincial Government in future is going to maintain certain arterial roads in that municipality and thus relieve the taxpayers of expense which they have hitherto borne. The arrangement made by the Government, with a view to solving the difficulties that have arisen because of taxation in rural wards, has had an immediate salutary effect. Experience is that wherever taxation reductions are brought about there is a response to such relief in added productivity.

Reeve Crouch and his Councilors have proved themselves careful administrators of the affairs of Saanich. It is a keen satisfaction to them to be able to reduce taxation. They will have their reward in the impetus which this move will give to progress. In these times, with the heavy Federal, provincial and municipal taxation to which the people have been subjected, the aim of all governments should be to lighten the load. Constructive statesmanship everywhere is reaching out towards this goal. It has been the desire of Reeve Crouch during his time in office to provide relief for the people of Saanich. The present instalment is something worth while. It is especially a matter of satisfaction to Reeve Crouch that he should have been so enthusiastic for the arterial road policy under which the Provincial Government has given Saanich the opportunity to reduce its mill rate.

FOR THE GAME'S SAKE

It may be somewhat of a thankless task to remind an age so wrapped up in the mantle of materialism that if there is one branch of endeavor in which a different purpose and viewpoint should obtain it is that of games. The pursuit of wealth or fame, or both, has entered too much into the play of people; into their leisure hours; into that time in their lives when there should be freedom from care and worry. Professionalism with its intense competitive spirit is proving the bane of games, is eroding the moral susceptibilities of those who watch sport of different kinds, and, among those who participate, is inculcating a strain that makes a game a labor instead of a joyous performance. In life nowadays there is a tendency away from the purpose of doing things for their own sake. It is the end, not the means, that is considered to be justified. In games the zest for play has been subordinated to some goal to be reached. In cricket it is not the Ashtes but the averages that are kept in mind. In baseball it is the salaries, and the home runs that put a premium on wage-earning power. Races are run with record-breaking performances always kept in view and it is the same throughout the whole gamut of sport. In praise of this conception it is claimed that it is well to live with a purpose. That is more true in the game of life than in the game of leisure, for the latter is a period of relaxation from the game of life. Even in living the purpose should be something more than earning a living. The task among many is a hard grind involving considerable stress and the tragedy of it all is intensified if play is made as strenuous as work; if games, even for amateurs, tend to be made a profession.

Chesterfield's advice to his son where sport was concerned was: "Take some pains to play a number of games tolerably well. Be careful to play no game supremely well." Spencer recorded the belief that a good billiard player was the sign of a mispent youth. These are old opinions, but at least they should serve to show that many years ago men were thinking in terms of how leisure should be employed. There is a latter-day movement to link up leisure with education; to show how the former should be pursued in relation to the latter and so that it may prove a handmaiden of true progress, but this movement has accomplished little if anything in arresting the modern trend of thought in the attitude towards games. Where there is materialism in so many of the actions and reactions of life it is difficult to exercise the demon from the realm of sport. There is too much money lying in wait for the superlative performer, too many of the world's plaudits for record-breaking performance. The public are to blame more so than the contestant who is successful. It is all due to a false perspective of life's values and of the gaudiness that should accompany achievements in the world of sport. It seems as if a new movement, a different attitude is required among those who are now considering the problem of the relation of leisure to education. Perhaps what that attitude should be is best suggested in a recent leading article in The Yorkshire Post from which the following is an extract:

"The injunction to play the game implies that a game is a game. To play the game does not necessarily mean to play the fool, but it most certainly emphasizes the need of play, of something not too serious, something not inconsistent with the laughter and frivolity entirely out of place in a modern counting-house or a modern store. It may be true that to play any game really badly, sooner or later, means boredom, though, from observation, it would seem that the 'rabbit' on the golf course generally enjoys himself immensely. But it is also true that when a game is played supremely well it is a game no longer, and that the strain of the average man to reach the skill of the super-endowed inevitably becomes a weariness of the flesh. Leisure is banished from his life. One anxiety follows another. It is strain for him from the rising to the setting of the sun. To worry about the why and the wherefore and the how, is to be numbered with the purblind who prefer a map to a landscape. And the moral that these reflections suggest is that, while, in the serious business of his life a man can hardly be too intently or too firmly of purpose, in the playtime—which is an essential part of a well-ordered and successful life—it is of the first importance that he should play."

AMERICAN DEBTS

A plea for the reversal of a repudiation of debt which has tarnished the good name of the United States in the eyes of the people of Great Britain is contained in a recent editorial in The Times-Leader of West Point, Mississippi. It deals with the English holders of the old Bank of Mississippi bonds who are now asking the Federal Government at Washington to make provision for the payment of the moneys due them. The Times-Leader says: "As a matter of justice, and to preserve the good name of the United States and the great State of Mississippi, and to compensate the innocent holders of these securities, steps should have been taken long ago to liquidate the obligation."

The bonds in question were issued during the reconstruction days following the American Civil War. At that time the Government of Mississippi was of an uncertain character. The Times-Leader describes it as having been in the hands of "carpetbaggers." This is the reason given for repudiation of the debt, "because the real citizens of the commonwealth had no part in its making." Whatever the cause of repudiation the debts were contracted on the basis of security for investment given by the Government in Mississippi. That state now holds that the obligation is one to be assumed by the Federal Government at Washington, which, according to The Times-Leader, "forced this condition on the people of Mississippi." That paper says it is squarely up to Congress to satisfy the English petitioners. There is no doubt that the American Government could do so, but it is not likely to do so in liquidating this debt but it could create a better impression than now prevails internationally as to the moral tendencies of its monetary transactions.

EXPORT OF ALCOHOL

Canada is talking very seriously about shutting down on the exportation of "likker" to the United States. It would be a good thing for Canada, for everybody that likes champagne or beer would have to go to Canada to get it and spend a lot of money on railroads, hotel bills, and post cards, besides what they pay for the drink. About the only way to scare Canada into having a heart to talk about annexing it. The one big bugaboo that stalks around Canada day and night and all the year around is annexation by the United States. Stop a moment and think of the trouble that would come of annexing Canada if she shuts down on letting us have "likker" and the Canadians will rush down to the boundary line with a quart bottle in one hand and a tin dipper in the other and pour us out all we want. Not that we want to annex Canada—far from such. Where could we drive our autos when we wanted to be free from snipers and reformers and bandits and hijackers and enforcement officers with their roaring shotguns if Canada was under the same laws that have been smeared over the U.S.A.? No, Canada is our land of refuge, our oasis in a dreary desert, our sanctuary.—Chicago Tribune.

Note and Comment

By R. B. D.

Let Glasgow flourish by the preaching of the Word.

We have had so much to say lately about serious things, that the time has come, as the Walrus said, to talk of other things. Glasgow must have been thinking of serious things when she adopted the motto quoted above and printed it on her civic coat-of-arms. Glasgow must have been thinking of other things when she revised the motto on her coat-of-arms and turned it into a slogan. Although of course it cannot be that the people of Glasgow, like some of their southern neighbors (who, according to another leader in the realm of theology, are rapidly becoming semi-pagan) are forsaking the path trodden by their fathers.

The motto of Glasgow became a slogan when it became simply and shortly, "Let Glasgow Flourish!" We had seen that slogan painted on several ships built in Glasgow, but we did not know it was an abbreviation until enlightened a few weeks ago by a patriarch employed on the staff of The Colonist who is familiar with the Scriptures and many other literary works of the first class. And when we were told about those things and thought about later things, we felt sure in our mind that if there had been a Baillie in Glasgow today like Baillie Nicol Jarvey the revision could never have been made.

However, Glasgow has been increasing in prosperity if she has been declining in grace. She has been growing in efficiency and has become the second city in point of population on the British Isles, although there are pessimistic observers of the trend of the times who say that the city has grown at the expense of the country round about it. Everything Glasgow has set her efficient hand to has prospered. Glasgow has owned and operated a tramway system for many years and has made it both a public convenience and a profitable institution—and that is something few modern municipalities have to their credit.

What is the secret of Glasgow's success in everything she undertakes? The secret is that long before Henry Ford demonstrated what an individual could do by the adoption of standards of efficiency Glasgow had demonstrated that a municipality could do by adopting and enforcing standards of efficiency. Glasgow had demonstrated that saving time is just as necessary to success in municipal business as the saving of babies is necessary to success in individual business. We have just seen a dispatch in the newspapers which indicates how thoroughly efficient Glasgow is in all things—little things as well as big things, in that respect differing from Aberdeen, whose efficiency, according to story-tellers, is limited to very little things.

One of the worthy Baillies (a Glasgow Baillie is the contemporary of a Victoria Alderman) must have been sauntering through the streets, watching the municipal laborers at work and making notes of their efficiency. In the course of his inspection the worthy Baillie noted that many of the laborers wanted a great deal of time filling and lighting their pipes. If tobacco smoking in Scotland is anything like it used to be filling and lighting a pipe is not such a simple and quick thing. It is in this country. The tobacco smoked in the old days was black and strong and was bought in strings—the length of the string depending upon the depth of the pocket of the purchaser. To cut the weed and pulverize it into a condition fit for the pipe took some time and, if the pipe happened to be "stuffed" so full that it would not draw—a condition not uncommon if the tobacco happened to be borrowed—lighting the pipe took a still longer time, not to speak of the waste of matches.

To make short a story which is already too long, the Glasgow Baillie suggested the appointment of a municipal pipe lighter. The municipal pipe lighter is "doing his stuff." In the course of his inspection the worthy Baillie noted that many of the laborers wanted a great deal of time filling and lighting their pipes. If tobacco smoking in Scotland is anything like it used to be filling and lighting a pipe is not such a simple and quick thing. It is in this country. The tobacco smoked in the old days was black and strong and was bought in strings—the length of the string depending upon the depth of the pocket of the purchaser. Mrs. Watt: "William, will you never get that string untangled for me?"
 William: "Well, I'm doing thirty knots an hour now!"

SCORES POLICY ON IMMIGRATION

Hon. H. H. Stevens Gives Striking Facts of Results of Government's Present Policy

TORONTO, March 29.—Addressing the Ward Six Liberal-Conservative Association members here last night, Hon. H. H. Stevens, M.P. of Vancouver, and former Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, leveled considerable criticism at the present Government's immigration policy. Nine years ago, he said, the census showed a population of 8,500,000; with the 1,000,000 brought in at a cost of $40,000,000 by the Government, and the natural increase the population should now be 11,500,000. Instead, Canada's population is now only 9,000,000. This, he continued, was a loss, making allowances for deaths, of 1,500,000 persons.

"Those who have gone out of the country have been largely native-born Canadians," said the speaker. "I am not saying a word against immigrants, British or European, but I do say we do not want to lose our own people. We want to retain them. WHERE ARE GRADUATES?" "I say to you, ask your members of the Legislature, the city council, the school boards, the university, the University of Toronto, and inquire from him where the honor graduates of the last eight years at that university are. I do not know, but I know it on good authority that 60 per cent of the honor graduates of Canadian universities for the last eight years are in the United States. They had to go there to get jobs. Paying $40,000,000 to get immigrants and letting more of our brightest and best immigrate is not the sort of national outlook Canada should have. We must stop this sweeping away of the brains of our country," Mr. Stevens said.

The Rhyming Optimist

By Althea Michaels

TODAY WAS GOOD
 Today was good; would you know why?
 At morn a robin flickered by
 And left a merry trail of song.
 His notes echoed lingered all day long!
 It does not take
 Great things to make
 Joy triumph over loss or wrong.
 Today was good because I heard
 A stranger speak a cheering word
 To one who went adrift, alone.
 By winds of strife and sorrow blown;
 A kindly deed,
 To me in need,
 And something of earth's grief had flown.

Today was good, as all days are,
 For always somewhere, near or far,
 Birds sing, flowers wake and hearts are kind.
 And always some we can find
 Love's coin to spend.
 Hope's light to lend,
 Faith's bloom to scatter down life's wind.

VOTERS' LIST TO BE CLOSED ON SATURDAY

Six Days Remains in Which to Register for Electoral Divisions of Victoria and Esquimalt

NEW ADDRESSES TO BE RECORDED

Only six more days remain in which to record new names on the provincial voters' list for the electoral division of Victoria or that of Esquimalt. Persons who have not yet been registered as voters in these constituencies, or who, having been registered, yet failed to vote at the last provincial election, are more particularly concerned.

Former residents of other constituencies who desire to have the right to vote here will require to register. Change of address within a constituency, and change of name consequent upon marriage, should also be recorded.

Registration now insures to the person whose name is placed on the list the right to cast a ballot at the next provincial election, whether that be held during the coming year or at some later date. There are no fees or charges of any kind to be paid.

Something like 400 applications for registration have been received during the past week, and it is probable that a large number of others who have delayed action will present applications during the present week.

Every British subject of the full age of twenty-one, whether male or female, and whether British by birth or by naturalization, is entitled to be registered if he or she has resided for six months in the province and for one month in the electoral division.

MR. F. HARDISTY NOTED FOOTBALLER

Local Resident Loses Brother Who Was Prominent in British
Sporting Circles

Mr. E. E. Hardisty, of 66 Howe Street, has received word of the death of his brother, Mr. Fred Hardisty, of Middlesbrough, Eng.

Mr. Fred Hardisty was a native of Harrowgate, Yorkshire, where he was born in 1855 and went to Middles-brough as a youth.

Mr. Hardisty was a player for the Middlesbrough Club from 1880 to 1886, and later he became a member of the North Riding F.A., with which he was associated for upwards of forty years. He held the office of vice-president of that body for some years, and for a time he also held the post of divisional secretary to the F.A. Amateur Cup committee. He also rendered much valuable service to the football world as a member of the council of the Football Association.

In cricketing circles, too, Mr.
Hardisty's name was prominent, he being for many years associated with the North Yorkshire and Durham Cricket League, of which he was honorary secretary.

Mr. Hardisty was a staunch churchman, and he had been actively connected with St. Hilda's Church for nearly fifty years and had served as warden.

Other posts he held were secretary to the Church House, attached to St. Hilda's; as a manager of St.
Hilda's School, and as a member of the Dr. Barnardo's Home, North Ormsby.

A Conservative in politics and recently retired from the office as chairman and treasurer of the Mid-dlebrough Conservative Club. Mr.
Hardisty retired from business a few years ago. He had been associated with Messrs. Bolckow, Vaughan & Company for nearly fifty years and was chief accountant at the time of retirement.

Mr. Hardisty's only son was killed during the Great War, but he leaves a widow and two daughters.

Annual Team Banquet Marks Sport Season At Victoria College

Victoria College was host on Friday night last to members of the rugby, hockey, basketball and golf teams, at the annual team banquet.

Guests present included members of the faculty, the present students' council and the council-elect. Prominently displayed on the head table were cups, the possession of which testified to the prowess of the students in athletic sports.

There was The Daily Province Cup, emblematic of the intermediate Rugby championship of British Columbia, the Macnaughton Heyland Cup for the city
intermediate Rugby championship, and the Charlie Kennedy Cup, which was won by the men's basketball champions of their division in the city league.

Professor P. H. Elliott, principal, referred to the fine playing of the Rugby team, and extolled the scholastic attainments of the players. Coach P. Willis spoke of the pleasure he had derived from association with the players. Other speakers were: Dr. E. B. Paul, principal emeritus; Professor J. Cann,
E. Sanderson, R. Humphry, E. S.
Parr, W. H. Gage and J. Black.

All present regretted that Mr. D.
Ellis, the captain of the Rugby team, could not be present, being confined to hospital on account of an injury sustained in the recent game with Ex-Magee. A presentation was made to Mr. Ellis Todd, the popular yell leader of the college. Each member of the different teams was presented with a crest bearing the college insignia and colors.

CLOSED SALMON SEASON NEEDED

Scientist Tells Convention Catch Is Decreased Because Small Fish Are Taken

PALO ALTO, Cal., March 29.—The International Pacific Salmon Federation closed a three-day conference in the Stanford University campus today by adopting a resolution calling for the prohibition of the sale of ocean caught salmon during June, July, August and the first half of September and endorsing legislation to prohibit the catching of immature salmon.

The resolution was based upon a report submitted by Dr. J. O. Snyder, professor of zoology at Stanford, who said the salmon catch was decreased as a result of catching immature salmon by troll, gill netting, and other methods. He said the salmon catch there had fallen to one-tenth of what it was ten years ago.

Plans were made for holding another meeting at an early date to draft uniform bills embodying legislation indicated by the resolution.

for submission to the Legislatures of Oregon, Washington and California.

The federation is composed of scientists and bureau of fisheries officials of the three Pacific Coast States and British Columbia.

LOCAL ENGINEERS DINE TOGETHER

Speaker Discovers New Type of Engineer in Hot Dog Stand

On Friday evening the Victoria Branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada held a business and social dinner and smoking concert at Hamsterley Lakeside, at which some forty members and guests were present.

Mr. Patrick Philip, Deputy Minister of Public Works, occupied the chair, and among the members present were Hon. F. P. Burden, Minister of Lands and Forests, E. Griffith, Deputy Minister of Railways, and Mr. J. P. Forde, resident engineer of the Dominion Public Works Department.

In Mr. Philip's speech, referring to the activities of the profession, he laid stress on the desirability of the amalgamation of the Engineering Institute with the various provincial societies of the professional engineers, on which problem committees of both organizations are at present engaged.

He paid a handsome compliment to the committee who were responsible for such a successful evening, and recommended that a similar gathering should be held quarterly each year. This success was chiefly attributable to Mr. I. C. Barltrop, Mr. H. P. Bourne, chairman of the local branch, and to Mr. K. M. Chadwick, the secretary.

Following Mr. Philip's speech, community choruses, led by Mr. R. Webb, were sung with much gusto. Hon. F. P. Burden then proposed the toast of "The Profession," and spoke of the absolute need of the engineer in the development of the country. He also reviewed the work of the many and varied branches of engineering which members of the profession were called upon to undertake. Mr. J. P. Forde spoke of the good work done during the late Government's regime by Mr. H. P. Bourne, Minister of Lands, and Minister of Public Works, respectively, in raising the status of the profession in the public mind, which work was being carried on by the present ministers, Hon. F. P. Burden and the Hon. N. S. Lougheed. Mr. Forde added a touch of humor to his speech in recalling one branch of the profession which had come to his notice during a trip between Los Angeles and San Diego, when his attention was called to a sign over a roadside house calling the public's attention to a "Hot Dog Engineer."

An excellent musical programme and sketch followed, when the efforts of Messrs. Bob Webb, Frank Alwood, and G. Ingledew were much appreciated. Musical accompaniment was ably provided by Mr. Percy Fletcher. A most enjoyable evening was terminated by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

Odd Fellows Will Hold Debate

The third of a series of debates will be held in the Odd Fellows Hall on Monday night, March 31, commencing at 8:30. The subject is of unusual interest to all the adult members of the order, and will be led by four brothers who have shown themselves in the past as being masters in the art of debate, after which there will be an open forum in which all members are expected to air their views.

The whole evening should be full of good opportunities, and the fact that the social committee is in charge is sufficient incentive to warrant a full attendance. Cordial invitation is extended to members of the two sister lodges and visiting brothers.

Workers Allowed To Enter Canada From Australia

VANCOUVER, B.C., March 29.—Eight employees of Mr. H. V. McVay, Australian capitalist and industrial leader, have been given permission by the Department of Immigration at Ottawa, to land in Canada. They will proceed at once to Waterloo, Ontario, where Mr. McVay has established a farm machinery plant. Another party of sixteen men are expected from Australia next month. The eight men were held here on board the R.M.S. Antrim because their arrival violated the contract labor regulations. However, special dispensation was given because, it is understood, they came in connection with the establishment of a new industry and because they are specialized artisans, difficult to replace.

OUTSIDE ENTRIES EXCEED RESIDENTS

Local Musicians Hold Back From Festival, With One Week More to File Entries

Since opening the office at Davis & King, Ltd., for the receiving of entries for the musical festival to be held May 6-10 inclusive, many interesting entries have been received, mostly from outside the city. Local entrants have delayed mailing out the required form. It is hoped that a larger number will be received during this week, which is the last one for receiving entries. The office will close next Saturday night.

It has been thought that the entry among those locally interested may have been caused by the mistaken idea that the more delayed the entry, the later the appearance of the entrant in his or her class. The order of competing in any class is determined by ballot, as soon as the entry list has been closed. These ballots are drawn by an individual chosen by the directors who is outside of the association, and entirely disinterested in the outcome.

Among the interesting entries already received is the National Juvenile Band of Vancouver; there are between fifty and sixty boys all under eighteen in this band. It will come from Vancouver Friday night, May 2, and return Saturday night. The Victoria Chamber of Commerce has kindly placed its rooms at the disposal of the boys for the day.

This band has also entered eight cornet soloists. Others entered for competition are the Victoria Girls' Band (about forty girls). Mrs. Hodgson's choir of Vancouver, vocalists, solos and two trios; soloists of various kinds from Courtenay, New Westminster, Duncan, Vancouver, Portland, and Seattle; vocal soloists from Sidney, Shawnigan and Victoria. Miss Lonsdale, of Shawnigan, has entered a choral society, and five school choirs. To show the versatility of some of our competitors, one man from Vancouver has entered seven classes.

P.G.E. BUSINESS IS IMPROVING

Government Railway Finds Better Returns for Both Passenger and Freight Traffic

ROADBED HAS BEEN IMPROVED

The increased revenues from the operation of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, which have been shown in the last annual report of the Government-owned railway, referred to during the session of the Legislature, gives excellent promise of being permanent in its character. This is borne out in a review of the situation by the manager of the line, who shows that there is considerable development taking place along the line of the railway, which promises well for the future.

The report of the manager contains the following review: The operation of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway has shown very gratifying results in the year 1929, and first and most important of all, from the standpoint of increased traffic.

The deficit on operation was $55,844.56, as compared with $132,109.78 in 1928, a reduction of $76,265.22. Operating revenues amounted to $561,274.79, as compared with $531,371.71 in 1928, and expenses totaled $617,119.35, as compared with $669,441.41 in the preceding year.

On the Squamish division there was an increase in freight earnings of $36,627.63, and I am pleased to be able to state that this was not due to some extraordinary or incidental movement, but to seemingly healthy development. There were, for instance, increases in transportation as compared with 1928 as follows: Agricultural products, 637 tons; animal products, 425 tons; mining products, 388 tons; forest products, 527 tons; miscellaneous products, 47 tons.

"It is gratifying to note that there is an increase in each of these classifications."

PASSENGER BUSINESS

"Not only was the freight traffic better than in any former year, but passenger traffic also showed an improvement, as reflected in the earnings, which were $4,806.97 better than in 1928.

"As regards expenses, last year was a very heavy one from the standpoint of maintenance, but notwithstanding that and the cost of handling increased traffic, expenses were kept down close to those of 1928. There were extraordinarily heavy renewals, 144,000 ties having been laid in the track, costing in material $71,000. Buildings had reached a period in life when repairs and painting were necessary on a somewhat extensive scale, and this programme was all undertaken and completed. Passenger equipment was generally improved in appearance as well as with additional conveniences and electric lighting on trains, and a better service of trains than in former years was maintained.

"The roadbed is now in good condition and it is not expected that there will be as heavy maintenance costs this year.

"As regards the North Shore branch, the action of the board of directors in closing the railway for passenger traffic is shown to have been justified by the results obtained. In the year 1928 there was a loss in operation of $153,513.34, and last year there was a profit of $18,576.76, an improvement in the year of $170,936.58.

"There has been a programme of construction of permanent and semi-permanent work carried out in the last three years of considerable magnitude, which has been brought about principally by the termination of the life of the wooden structures which were built fifteen years ago.

DISTRICT DEVELOPMENT

"Progress in the interior is evidenced by the development which is taking place in distributing centres such as Hazelton, Bulkley Lake, and Terrace. In the year 1928 there was an incorporation of a village and there were numerous sales of lots in the village and homes and buildings erected thereon. The railway company spent a large sum of money two years ago in providing the townsite with a good water system, and this in some measure served to promote the development which is taking place. Due to building activity the system last year had to be extended. Headquarters for the construction of the Public Works Department were established there last summer. Progress was also made in the village of Quesnel, where electric lighting and water systems were installed by private enterprise.

"Healthy growth has also been witnessed in other districts along the railway by the building of schools and community halls. The company is hopeful of further progress and consequent increased traffic this year."

Grace of Line Characterizes Newest Hats

THE smart younger set seems to approve of the beret straw which has been fashioned into this little hat very similar to the beret. (2) A novelty-colored braid is posed high on this "veil hat" of light-weight felt, which is among the Spring's smart models for sports and travel. (3) The ultra-modern picture hat with the appealingly wistful brim of rippling variety, made of gleaming black straw, is a chic accessory to the more formal type of afternoon ensemble.

MUSICAL HISTORY

No. IV
By G. JENNINGS BURNETT

No time in the musical history of the world is so replete with eminent composers, geniuses of the first rank and great creative skill as in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. In view of the fact that Johann Sebastian Bach, one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of all musicians, was the culminating figure of generations of musicians for a space of not less than 250 years, no better example can be cited in support of the affirmative side of the question of physical and mental heredity. For the gift of music which had impressed its stamp upon the race was exhibited in the greatest degree in J. S. Bach, 1685-1750. What a wealth of musical meaning and intelligence is associated with that name, composer of monumental works that will live for all time.

Had he only left us that mine of wealth contained in the two volumes of his Preludes and Fugues in all major and minor keys that alone would have incurred a debt of gratitude from musicians of all ages. The first volume was written by Köthen, the second volume later in life at Leipzig. In the old system of tuning prior, and up to the time of Bach, some of the familiar keys would be in beautiful tune, while the other keys would be noticeably, if not unbearably, out of tune. Bach knew that as long as this condition existed the progress of instrumental music as far as key relationship, or passing from key to key was concerned, would be at a standstill. So the two volumes of Preludes and Fugues, written in every major and minor key with the equal temperament tuning, was Bach's unanswerable proof that all keys can be so tuned and tempered to be available for all the use and demands of the composer. Hence the name "The Well-Tempered Clavier."

The Preludes, perfect in themselves, display clever canonic devices and the form patterned to the ideas to be expressed. The Fugues (with modulatory episodes) in inversion, augmentation, diminution and in stretto, with pedal point climax, are amazing in their wonderful continuity and coherence, like a beautiful temple of tone with every note in its place, not one lacking, the mastery of which is considered the foundational work for pianistic ability. As studies for fugue playing there are the "Fifteen Two-Part Inventions," and the "Fifteen Three-Part Inventions," then called symphonies. In the dance forms are his suites, the "Six English Suites," and the smaller set, "Six French Suites." The six "Partitas" were suites of a more dignified style. A set of variations composed for his pupil Goldberg, who died very young and was the Court Musician to Count Bruhl, are called "The Goldberg Variations." The "Chromatic Fantasy," with its daring harmonies, pointing the way of styles now awaiting future development, is a great work upon which a contemporary of Bach wrote on a fly-leaf, "This will be admired in coming centuries," a prediction which has been amply verified. A number of toccatas, preludes and fugues and the "Italian Concerto" were also composed for the clavier. His principal choral works are the No. 4 Mass in B minor, "The Passion of St. Matthew and St. John." (Bach is supposed to have written five) Christmas Oratorio, over two hundred cantatas, sacred and secular, motets, songs, chorales, "Funeral Ode to Princess Eberhardine" and an "Ode on the Death of Prince Leopold of Köthen, or Cöthen." The most celebrated of the sacred cantatas are "Sleepers Wake," "A Stronghold Sure," "God's Time is the Best," "Jesu, Priceless Treasure" and "Sing Ye to the Lord." The last named was given in Victoria years ago by the Sheffield Choir, under Dr. Coward, with Dr. Hodgson at the piano. His orchestral works consist of concertos, four overtures or suites, six Brandenburg concertos are the most famous, dedicated to the Margraf of Brandenburg. Bach also wrote the "Coffee Cantata" and the "Barn Cantata" with accompaniment of organ and orchestra. His organ fugues have never been equalled for grandeur or dignity. His most celebrated works for the organ are Toccata and Fugue in D major, and D minor. Fantasia and Fugue in C minor, Passacaglia in C minor and six sonatas, besides a large number of choral preludes. These preludes are works of the highest art value with its clever counterpoint woven round the choral melody. The themes of some of his organ works were from the violin sonatas of Corelli, Legrenzi and others. Most of the organ works were written during the Weimar period, 1708-1717.

His "Musical Offerings" is the name Bach gave to the theme that Frederick the Great gave him for developing. It is a fine musical subject in the minor key showing how truly musical the king was. Bach had extemporized upon it before the king and also upon a fugue in six parts, with such unapproached mastery, that the king repeatedly said, "There is only one Bach." He wrote to the king on his return to Leipzig, "I engaged to elaborate more perfectly the royal theme and to make the world acquainted with it." The last great musical monument erected to himself is "The Art of Fugue," in which fifteen fugues and four canons upon one theme are developed. Bach wished to show in this work the utmost that could be accomplished with a single theme. Regarding the life of Bach and the many interesting episodes in his life, also matter relating to the nature of the man himself, this must be the material for another essay.

Learned Judges Decided Young Lady Not a Person

Humorous Proceedings in Case of Miss Margaret Hall Before Supreme Court of Scotland Recalled by Recent Decision in Montreal

By ETHEL LINDA HADWEN

It was admitted by the judges that if a woman obtained the degree of LL.B. (Bachelor of Law) they could not refuse to allow her to follow the law, but at that time I do not think that the university would have accepted a woman as law student. At present all the faculties in the university are open to women, and have granted degrees for some years past. In 1924, moreover, a Mrs. E. E. Gibson was appointed a justice of the peace in Edinburgh.

All the arguments in favor of Miss Hall were of no avail. The whole college of justice of thirteen judges decided that she had no power to grant the prayer of the petitioner, therefore dismissed the petition and refused decree on July 12, 1901.

The Glasgow Evening Citizen of July 18, 1901, printed the following verses, which apply and wittily summed up the case:

COCKIE-LAW!
Is a Girl a Person?—(Decided July 12, 1901)

There were thirteen weighty judges sitting on a little case,
And the cause of all the clocking was a winsome lady's face;
For she asked a pressing question, And it made them cold and hot—
"Is a little maid a 'person' in your eyes, or is she not?"

Like the girls who practise medicine, Teach and write, and clerk and draw,
She aspired to make her living From the pickings of the law.
So she mastered Bell and Rankine, Climbing up the hills of brass,
Till she thought she was a "person" In her eyes, or is she not?

She had seen her little sisters Capped M.A.'s, with applause,
And she wished to climb life's ladder As a Bachelor of Laws.
So she asked to be examined, And to pass, if pass she could,
Forth into the black profession Of the pleading brotherhood.

But the thirteen clocking judges Shook their feathers out and swore
That the only kind of "persons" They had ever passed before
Were young men with shaven faces, And they could not recognise
This fair lady, in her laces, As a "person" in their eyes.

But the public are the judges Of the judges on the bench,
And the public roared with laughter At this answer from the bench.
If the lawyers won't let women Pick from out their well-filled bowl,
Better say so straight than argue That a hen is not a fowl!

—Amos Chiseler.

INVERTEBRATE USAGE

Answers were filed for the incorporated Society of Law Agents in Scotland, who, after quoting many acts of sedentary, and stating that, although, according to invertebrate usage of custom in Scotland, the practice of the law had been higher, confined exclusively to men, taking into consideration the fact that women practised law in the United States, and had recently been admitted by special legislation to the bar in France, they concluded that they did not conceive it to be their interest or duty to maintain the practice of the law as it had been.

This was very good, and is to the credit of the society, but when the case came up in the courts of the first division of the Court of Session, a different atmosphere was encountered. The case was pleaded before the Lord President and Lords Adam, McLaren and Kinnear.

Mr. Horne, counsel for Miss Hall, presented the case, concluding by saying that no doubt it would create a novel position in the profession to admit women, yet modern practice seemed to alter the barriers against their admittance into professions, and there was no inherent illegality in a woman being admitted to the practice of the law.

After observations from the judges in reference to various acts of Parliament and cases decided, Lord McLaren said, "I hardly think you need the General Interpretation Act, because the word used is 'person' in all the clauses, and it is not necessary in common language to say 'he' or 'she,' because, according to the ordinary usage when you speak of male and female persons you always use the masculine pronoun, which is understood to include the feminine."

SEARCH FOR PRECEDENTS

The argument continued, and it was related how that in former times an advocate's commission was all that was necessary to admit his chief clerk to practise, and that if an advocate had had a woman clerk he could have commissioned her. That privilege had been taken away by statute. Mr. Horne argued that the court had power to make rulings as to the admission of persons to conduct cases before it. Lord Kinnear asked for authorities, and Mr. Horne replied that it was impossible to give any authority from cases, because no application had been made before. Lord Kinnear retorted, "Because nobody thought of it."

Lord Adam asked whether there was not a positive custom of men only?

There was a long discussion on the case of Dr. Jex Blake vs. Senatus of the University of Edinburgh, and Miss Anderson, who succeeded in getting a medical qualification from the Apothecaries Company of London. The act of 1876 indicates that the powers of every body entitled under the Medical Act to grant a qualification shall extend to all persons without regard to sex.

Then the judges discussed questions of precedents and Lord McLaren remarked that there were cases where the want of precedent would not impose a disability, as for instance supposing a black man applied. It would not do to say that because no black man had ever applied before, he should be under a disability.

The Outer House judges in the end decided that they would not take the responsibility of deciding a question of such novelty and importance on themselves alone and appointed parties to prepare, print, and give copies to the judges of that division and of the second division and the Permanent Lords Ordinary.

Long documents reciting ancient usages, acts of Parliament, acts of sederunt, power of women to vote or be elected to public bodies or not, on the ground of sex, were lodged.

At the Request of Church of England Journal, Judges, Politicians, Labor Leaders, Musicians, Painters, Librarians and School Inspectors Give Interesting Testimony

Many Classes Unite in Praise of Bible Truth

IN response to a recent inquiry by The Canadian Churchman, the organ of the Church of England in Canada, a number of prominent public men of Ontario designated their favorite passage of Scripture and at the same time testified to the value of the Bible in both personal and community life. The selections mentioned are all of them familiar verses which have been widely used in the life of the Christian church.

The favorite passage of the Hon. Mr. Justice of the Peace, Judge Hardy, of Brantford, deals with eternal principles of conduct as expressed in Micah vi, 8: "And what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?" The invitation given by Jesus as recorded in Matt. xi, 28-29, is chosen by Dr. Maurice Hutton of the University of Toronto: "Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly of heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." The choice of Dr. Albert Ham is held by The Canadian Churchman as being a fitting one for a musician in that both verses are taken from the Psalms, the hymnary of the Jewish Church. One is Psalm cxix, verse 54: "Thy statutes have been my songs in the house of my pilgrimage," and the other is the assurance in Psalm cxix, verse 11: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help."

DANGER OF VANITY

An appropriate selection is made by the well-known artist, Mr. E. W. Grier, from the first chapter of Genesis, verse 26: "And God said, let us make man in our image, after our likeness; and let him have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowls of the air, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." The contribution

Spanish Mission Church

MAGNIFICENT in size and detail is the cathedral at Guadalajara, Mexico, over the massive central doorway of which is a sculptured "Assumption," while massive pillars support the lofty roof, rich chapels are closed in by gates of gilded metal, ornate, handsome altars abound, and above the choir, with its magnificent stained glass windows, soars the frescoed dome. Here, too, in this old mission church of Western Mexico, is a great Murillo, while treasures of vessels and vestments in marvelous old coffers are hidden away in dim recesses where one would look for nothing but cobwebs and dust.

made by the politician of the group, the Hon. O. Howard Ferguson, Premier of Ontario, is held by him to be "one of the soundest bits of advice to be found anywhere in the Scriptures," in that "there is nothing that contributes so largely to one's undoing as vanity and conceit." The passage is: "Woe unto you when all men speak well of you." The place of the child naturally engages the attention of Dr. James L. Hughes, who for many years was Chief Inspector of Schools in Ontario. He cites the familiar passage in Matt. xix, 14: "Jesus said, suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me: for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." The series of answers closes with two verses sent in by a prominent layman, who prefers to remain anonymous. Probably no New Testament passages are better known, with the exception of the Lord's Prayer, than these: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish but have everlasting life" (John iii, 16), and John xiv, 1-3: "Let not your hearts be troubled: Ye believe in God, believe also in me. In My Father's house are many mansions. . . . I go to prepare a place for you."

Ending the symposium on this excellent note the writer goes on to say that "No book has been so deeply loved or held in such high honor, no book has been so widely quoted and no book has held so compelling an authority over the hearts and consciences of men. If in every home in Canada this book was read regularly and with understanding, the problems created by crime and wrongdoing would lose their formidableness and a new spirit of helpfulness and brotherhood would enrich the lives of all men regardless of class or creed."

SEVEN PICTURES ENGAGE STARS

United Artists Have Full Repertoire for Leading Figures in Screenland

Mary Pickford, Norma Talmage, Gloria Swanson, Ronald Colman, Eddie Cantor, Walter Huston, Jeanette MacDonald and other stars are now either working or will be working within a month in seven United Artists talking pictures that are either in production or preparation. Charlie Chaplin's synchronized "City Lights" continues to near completion, and Howard Hughes' "Hell's Angels" is being edited.

Miss Pickford has chosen a story by Benjamin Glazer, scenarist of "Seventh Heaven," an original screen drama, entitled, "Forever Yours," which tells of woman's devotion through the years from girlhood to old age. She is casting it now.

Miss Talmage is casting "Flame of the Flesh," with Sam Taylor, who will direct her. He is the director of "Coquette," "Tempest" and "The Taming of the Shrew," and this is to be his first film as producer-director.

Miss Swanson is rehearsing "What a Widow!" under direction of Allan Dwan, who directed her in "Manhandled." The talking picture that follows her tremendous success, "The Trepasser," has in its cast Owen Moore, Ian Keith, Marguerite Livingston and Buster West. Miss Swanson sings several songs and wears many gowns in an ultra-sophisticated story by Josephine Lovett.

Mr. Colman is now appearing as "Baffles," a role that is much more similar to "Building Drummond" than to the part he played in "Condemned." Harry d'Arrast is directing this Samuel Goldwyn production, from Sidney Howard's scenario. Kay Francis, David Torrence, Allison Skipworth, Frances Dade and Wilson Bengt are in the cast. The film is more than half-way through camera work.

Mr. Cantor is to appear in the Samuel Goldwyn-Florence Ziegfeld all-Technicolor film version of "Whoopee," with the original cast and with Mr. Ziegfeld's personal supervision of the production.

Mr. Huston has the title role in "Abraham Lincoln," David Wark Griffith's first all-talking picture, now in rehearsal. Una Merkel has the role of Ann Rutledge.

Miss MacDonald has the principal singing role in "Bride 66," Arthur Hammerstein's first musical film. Also in the cast that sings the new compositions of Rudolf Friml are John Garrick, Joseph MacGregor, Joe E. Brown, Zasu Pitts and Robert Chisholm.

Historic Anniversaries of March Recalled in Succinct Summary

Every student of local history knows that a little over a century and a half ago the coast of what is now British Columbia was shrouded in mystery and doubt. It is remarkable that the month of March commemorates so many outstanding events in Coast history, viz.: the initial step in the unraveling of these mysteries and doubts, the intervening step towards the opening up of the country, and the final step of the institution of organized government, which culminated in the birth of Canada's most western province.

The English merchant, Michael Lok, resident in Venice in 1596, was responsible for one of the great mysteries concerning our coast. Lok originated the tale of the doings of an ancient Green mariner, named Apóstolos Valerianos or Juan de Fuca, who, according to Lok, found a channel between the forty-seventh and forty-eighth parallels, through which he sailed from the North Pacific into the North Atlantic.

The Reverend Purchas included Lok's tale in his wonderful book of travel, "Purchas His Pilgrimage," which was published in 1625 and gave publicity to Lok's tale. This publicity started the quest for the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

ARRIVAL OF COOK

The British Government, being keen to find a navigable passage from the Atlantic to the Pacific, instructed its renowned explorer, Captain Cook, to examine the Pacific coastline of North America between the forty-seventh and forty-eighth parallels of latitude in search of the de Fuca Strait. Cook faithfully carried out his instructions. On March 22, 1778, he thought he saw an opening which appeared to be that mentioned by Lok. Nearer approach spot. In his chagrin Cook named showed by a line of breakers that no opening existed at that particular point lying to the northward "Cape Flattery." The fates were against Cook, for a blustering March gale then sprang up, and drove him out to sea, and in consequence he missed the opening which he was seeking and which actually lay to the immediate northward of the very cape which he had named "Flattery."

On March 29 Cook reached Nootka, where the astonished natives greeted him with wild but pleasing chants and incantations, as well as harangues and weird rituals. Cook spent some time at Nootka and, during his stay, obtained the sea otter skins which were soon to create the mercantile fur trade which was of such momentous importance in unraveling the mysteries of the coast. It was an English fur trader, Captain Charles William Barkley, who, during one of his fur trading trips, discovered to his great astonishment an opening a little to the northward of the point which Cook had named "Cape Flattery." Mrs.

Barkley, who accompanied her husband, tells us that Captain Barkley, believing that the opening must be "the long lost Strait of Juan de Fuca," named it after de Fuca and placed it on his chart.

Barkley's discovery of an opening so short a distance to the northward of the 48th parallel caused the British Government to instruct Captain George Vancouver to explore this newly-discovered Strait of Juan de Fuca, and determine whether it formed a Northwest passage such as that which had been described by Michael Lok. Vancouver's careful examination of the inland waters disclosed the falsity of the Lok tale and proved that no Northwest passage existed in that locality. It also proved that Nootka was situated on a large island to which Vancouver then gave his name, coupled with that of Quadra, the Spanish commander then at Nootka, in token of their mutual friendship and esteem.

MARCH, 1778

Thus Cook's stay at Nootka in March, 1778, created the fur trade, a fur trader discovered a strait which seemed to be the one mentioned by Lok. Vancouver's examination of this strait proved the nonexistence of any such Northwest Passage as that described by Michael Lok, and thereby cleared up one of the great mysteries of the coast. The ocean fur trade of this coast developed to the extent of the practical extermination of the sea otter. The Eastern fur traders from Montreal, however, had extended their overland fur trade to the Pacific seaboard and the famous Hudson's Bay Company had established their headquarters at Fort Vancouver, on the Columbia River. During the progress of the Oregon boundary dispute with the United States, the Hudson's Bay Company, as a precautionary measure against the contingency of the American claims being sustained and Fort Vancouver coming under American control, sought a new site for their Pacific headquarters which would be one certain to remain British territory.

MARCH, 1843

Chief Factor Douglas (afterwards Sir James) selected Victoria as the new site, and on March 14, 1848, he landed and founded "Port Victoria." After the territory in which Fort Vancouver was situated was ceded to the United States, Fort Victoria became the Hudson's Bay Company's Pacific headquarters. The trade and commerce of Fort Victoria increased and becoming general, the British Government, in 1849, decided to establish Vancouver Island as a British Colony.

MARCH, 1850

Richard Blanshard was appointed as Governor and landed at Victoria on March 10, 1850. On the following

First Governor Came Eighty Years Ago

RICHARD BLANSHARD

day he read his proclamation establishing the Colony of Vancouver Island—"the first British colony in the North Pacific."

The founding of Port Victoria by Douglas in March, 1843, was the intermediate step between the creation of the fur trade, due to Cook's stay at Nootka in March, 1778, and the establishment of the first British colony on the Pacific by Governor Blanshard in March, 1850. Due to the gold rush of 1858, part of the present mainland of the province was made a second colony in that year and was given the name of "British Columbia" (selected by Queen Victoria). These two colonies were united into one, under the name of British Columbia, in 1866. This united colony of British Columbia entered the Dominion of Canada and became the Province of British Columbia in 1871.

Thus the crucial epochs between the state of ignorance, mystery and apocryphal tales of explorations existing prior to March, 1778, and the establishment, in March, 1850, of responsible government, culminating in the birth of the Province of British Columbia, all belong to the Springtime month of March.

The Listening Post

By WALTER THURMULL (Copyright, 1929, by North American Newspaper Alliance)

From days of old, when knights were in vogue, or something of the sort, The ancients yell of stout John L. And tell you how he ruled the sport. But, while John was a man of might, A grand old battler, game and fine, I saw the Dempsey-Willard fight. And I will just take Jack for mine. The ancient host will sit and boast, And toast Ed Delahanty's play. They claim that he would surely be Above the hitters of today. Well, Del was sure a pearl of price; He socked the ball, and that's the truth; But, having seen him once or twice, I'll just be satisfied with Ruth.

Certain performers are milestones on the road of sport, and, as someone has said, milestones don't come every few yards, but they always stand somewhere ahead. Many tell you there are no more good heavyweights. Whether there are or not, there will be. Disregarding Sharkey and Schmeling, and refusing the floor to Scott, you can find other promising material. Don't be fooled concerning Campolo, just because he didn't do better against a tough, experienced man such as Risko, who fought like a combination of a porcupine and a windmill, retaining the best features of each. Campolo is a very likely-looking prospect. He is improving all the time.

Willie Stripling, of Georgia, has everything a champion needs, except the disposition. If you don't think he is good, just try to get one of these other heavies to meet him. You will find they all have engagements somewhere else. Tuffy Griffiths, at his best, isn't a setup. They say all Carnera has is size, strength and speed. That is all an elephant has, but nobody is very anxious to annoy an elephant. No, the present crop of heavyweights isn't so bad as it has been painted.

The road is steep to the peak of fame. Which only the mighty climb. And many are good in the hard-fought game. But there's only one "all time." Eckersall, gone where warriors rest, Up yonder, behind the blue. You will find, on heights where they seat the best. There's a place, old friend, for you.

Many are keenly disappointed that the Kentucky Derby will be run without Mr. Whitney's Blood and Whincor, but the race is trying on any youngsters except those with the sturdiest of legs. What makes the Lexington classic such a stirring event is that before it is run, nobody really knows which the great three-year-old may prove to be. Carrying 126 pounds over a mile and a quarter so early in the season is a severe test. The Derby breaks as many horses as it makes. Some contestants, entered as stake horses, prove to be only selling players.

Hockey on the average has been outdrawing boxing at New York's Madison Square Garden. The reason is that hockey furnishes more and better fights.

Wilbert Robinson is still chortling with glee over the apparent return to form of his star shortstop. Brooklyn's battle cry is, "Glenn Wright, all right."

While he who makes a hole-in-one is proud beyond compare, These putts of some 300 yards Are really very rare.

So, could we always drive the green And later can the ball From, say, three feet, we'd take a two. And would not weep at all.

We still say that the golf club with the largest membership on earth is the niblick.

Sam had been the despair of the girls of the village. But he was to be married at last. "Ah, Sam," said Farmer Brown. "So I hear you've put up the banns at last." "Aye, sir," responded Sam. "I were prayed for the third time in church last Sunday."

COURTENAY- POWELL RIVER LINK SOUGHT

Mr. W. W. Duncan Looks Into Opportunities for Ferry Between Paper Town and Comox

HEAVY PRODUCE TRAFFIC ASSURED

A determined effort is to be made by the farmers of the Comox Valley, backed up by the business men of Courtenay, to secure a better connection with the industrial centre at Powell River. A move is being made to have the Government of the province institute a ferry service between the paper manufacturing centre at Powell River, twenty miles distant from Courtenay, and the latter city, so that the farmers may compete on fair terms in the supplying of this desirable industrial centre.

With some 5,000 people resident at Powell River and with the preparation of plans for the expenditure of another $2,000,000, therein extending the plant, following the acquisition of the Lolo River power possibilities, the market for the paper centre is a most desirable one. It is announced by Mr. A. E. McMaster, general manager of the paper company, that this $2,000,000 investment, in addition to that already spent on the plant, means only the beginning for another $2,000,000 expenditure which the company has in view.

Mr. W. W. Duncan, markets commissioner for the province, has been on a visit to Courtenay, where he met the farmers and discussed with them their needs. He urged upon them the taking care of their production so that it might reach the markets in the very best of condition, and up to standard. In this connection he recalled what he had seen in connection with other markets, and the great advantages that accrued to the placing of an uniformly high class of production on the market.

The farmers, backed up by resolutions favorable to the plan by the Board of Trade of Courtenay, and the assurance of the business men of the city that they would do all they could to assist in the securing of ready access to the market, which was open to fresh farm and garden products at Powell River, urged Mr. Duncan to use his influence in trying to induce the Government to provide for a ferry to give this desired connection.

The farmers have agreed to work co-operatively in an endeavor to meet the demands of Powell River, if such means of communication is afforded them to reach that market.

COLLIERY IS AGAIN ACTIVE

SEVENTY-FIVE MEN ARE NOW ENGAGED AT MORDEN
MINE

Property Is Ready to Produce About 300 Tons of Coal Per Day

Rapid progress is being made in the reopening of the Morden coal mine, situated about ten miles south of Nanaimo and adjoining the South Westfield field. The new Canadian Coal & Iron Company, Limited, has opened its offices in the Hall Building, Vancouver, for the present, and active work in de-watering the mine and installing new equipment where necessary was begun some weeks ago under Chief Engineer Carle and Superintendent Graham.

The preliminary work is now practically completed. A force of about seventy-five workmen and miners, and the property is now ready to produce about 300 tons of coal per day. The Morden coal was used here for several years prior to 1922, and was always held in high regard.

BUENA VISTA HAS NEW MANAGEMENT

Well-Known Island Hostelry to Re-open on Wednesday After Remodelling

The Buena Vista Hotel at Cowichan Bay will open its hospitable doors on Wednesday under the supervision of Major Fanning. The hotel has been entirely remodelled and redecorated. The exterior has been tastefully painted in cream and black with Tudor style gables surrounded by a cheery red roof. Inside, the spacious lounge hall gives a hearty welcome with its real log fire and stone mantelpiece. The chairs and curtains are in soft Eastern coloring, all being designed for comfort. Likewise the reception-room contains couches and chairs in harmonizing tones against paneled walls.

The bedrooms are dainty and restful, and from the windows extensive views of the bay and Mount Tsohalem can be enjoyed. Bathrooms, with abundant hot and cold water, are plentiful. The sportsman in search of recreation for mind and body will find in this hotel a paradise, for the salmon fishing in the bay is of world-wide reputation, while in the rivers which flow seaward to the bay are abundance of trout.

Excellent duck shooting is within easy reach, and pheasant, grouse and deer are plentiful in the district. A hard tennis court is to be added in due course to the hotel grounds and a new bathhouse has been erected on the wharf where boats are available.

INTENDS TO BID FOR BUNKER TRADE

Contract for Coal Drilling at Port Hardy Has Been Awarded by Northern Pacific Collieries

At a meeting of the Northern Pacific Collieries, Limited, held yesterday at the office of the solicitor, Mr. P. J. Simons, the directors awarded the contract for drilling in the coal measures of the company at Port Hardy to the Mitchell Diamond Drilling Company, Limited, of 304 B.C. Mining Building, Vancouver. The contract provides for a large amount of drilling on the company's extensive properties at Port Hardy and work is to commence on April 15.

Mr. Harry Adams, the company's engineer in charge, has forwarded to the office of the company at 714 View Street, large samples of coal taken from outcroppings on the property. The directors of the company announced yesterday that immediately upon receipt of satisfactory returns as a result of the drilling operations from the company's engineer, the company will proceed to sink a shaft and install the necessary machinery and equipment for the handling of the coal. On account of this property being situated on tidewater, the coal from Port Hardy can be shipped without necessity of any haulage and in this way it can be delivered at a very economical price to ships, either as cargo or bunker, at close proximity to the shaft, thus enabling the company to deliver the coal f.o.b. Port Hardy at a very low rate.

The question of pulverized coal is also receiving the attention of the directors.

IRREGULARITY STILL EVIDENT

NEW YORK, March 29.—A slightly better tone of business, with still numerous evidences of irregularity in several industries is noted in the weekly reviews of R. G. Dun & Co. and Bradstreet's. Virtually the last week of the first quarter of the year the general situation remains about the same as the preceding week, but signs of improved conditions are increasing in number as winter recedes.

Unfavorable and unjustified rumors have been responsible for the recent drops in the prices of Sears, Roebuck and Montgomery Ward. In the opinion of Chicago brokerage circles, in the case of Sears Roebuck, a slight delay in the sales report for the third four-week period, which was due on March 26, caused anxiety. The report was held up, however, by delays in the mails caused by big storms and when the figures are compiled they are likely to be much more favorable than rumor had hinted, according to specialists in the company's reports. In the case of Montgomery Ward it was pointed out the stock made a low record for 1930 on a rumor that March would show only a moderate improvement, if any, over January and February, and that in this event the showing for the quarter could not be very favorable. However, Easter of this year will be three weeks later than it was last year, and as Easter week buying ushers in the Spring retail trade, this affects all lines of merchandising.

Canadian Pacific February net, after taxes, was $851,492, against $1,791,372 in the 1929 month. Two months $1,587,274 against $3,687,308. London—Bar silver 197.8, off 1-16d; forward 195-16d, off 1-16d; gold bars, $45 11 1-4d, unchanged.

Norma Talmadge Appears for First Time in Talkies

Favorite Star Interprets Show Girl Heroine in Rapid-Fire Romance of Modern Stage Life—Acress Sings, Talks, and Dances in Best Role of Career at Capitol This Week

Motion Picture Technique Is Carefully Preserved

NORMA Talmadge, whose popularity as one of the ten most successful screen stars has never waned, comes now in a production that promises new revelations of her talent. In "New York Nights," the musical, all-talking picturization of the stage play "Tin Pan Alley" by Hugh Stanislaus Stange, which opens at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow, she will not only appear in a role particularly suited to her gifts—the role of a chorus girl—but she will be seen dancing and will be heard singing the newest Al Jolson-Dave Dreyer composition, "A Year From Today."

Milestone's direction, however, she offers even a more convincing and of the most successful pictures she ever made, "Kiki," presented her as a typical Broadway chorine. In "New York Nights," under Lewis sonality of a show girl who continues a marriage with a worthless song writer in the hope that she can reform him. In the process she runs the full Broadway gamut of night life, adventures and resplendent apartments.

Playing the lead opposite Miss Talmadge, for the fourth consecutive picture, is Gilbert Roland as the song writer, John Wray, actor-playwright, is the "heavy"; Lilyan Tashman is a hard-boiled chorus girl. Others in the cast are Roscoe Karns and Mary Doran.

It was expressly stipulated by Miss Talmadge before "New York Nights" was begun that the old motion picture technique of telling a story in pictures was not to be sacrificed. The star felt that the theatre was a separate institution with a formula that belonged to the theatre, and that motion pictures likewise were a separate entity with methods of presentation developed after years of experience. She did not want the tried and true pictorial drama in which she has made her great reputation subordinated to the theatre, just because dialogue has been injected into pictures the last two years.

BACKSTAGE DRAMA AT PLAYHOUSE

Miss Belle Baker is starred in "Song of Love," with Good Supporting Cast

Belle Baker, America's greatest vaudeville artist, makes her motion picture debut in "Song of Love," the all-talking, singing, vivid backstage drama coming to the Capitol Theatre on Monday. Miss Baker has consistently refused to appear on the screen because she felt that the talkies had not reached the point to do justice to the human voice. Columbia made the offer at a psychological time. Miss Baker feels now that talking films are sufficiently perfected to reproduce the voice that is so life-like. Another factor that influenced Miss Baker to make her debut at this particular time was the script Columbia Pictures presented for Miss Baker's approval. The popular vaudeville favorite felt that "Song of Love" was a vehicle that catered to her particular talents.

Belle Baker is great. She has the ability to sway an audience from tears to laughter. She has a personality that captivates her hearers; she has the gift of characterization which transforms a song from mere lyrics and musical notes into a living dramatic thing; she possesses a versatility that enables her to do a pathetic or humorous number with equal facility and talent.

Appearing with Miss Baker in "Song of Love," a backstage musical drama, are Ralph Graves, David Durand and Eunice Queens. Eric C. Kenton directed.

MYSTERY AND HUMOR TOGETHER

"Whispering Gallery" Will Draw Large Attendance to Royal This Week

The mystery play entitled "The Whispering Gallery," which the Gordon McLeod Players will present this week at the Royal Victoria Theatre, is one of the best thrillers that has been written, as it has an interesting story running through its thrills and comedy. First produced in London a few years ago at the Garrick Theatre, it was, like "The Ghost Train," an instant success. Written by Percy Robinson and Terence de Marnay, "The Whispering Gallery" is a play with a prologue and three acts. One may as well say here that it behooves patrons to be in their seats at the rise of the curtain, as the prologue has so much bearing on the plot of the play, the beginning being the keynote of all the subsequent happenings, twenty years after.

The action of the play takes place in the studio of an old house in Cornwall, England, belonging to one Martin Conell. Here a tragedy takes place, which is portrayed in the prologue. Twenty years after, the old place and studio is in the hands of another Conell who, when the first act opens, has asked friends down to stay at the house which he has been waiting against, although he has inherited it.

To tell you the things that happen there would be to spoil the thrill you will get when you hear the whispers in that gallery. There is some particularly fine comedy work for which Roland Gillett is chiefly responsible, although Claude Bailey has also a most humorous role, one which will come as a surprise to his many admirers. Gordon McLeod, who is producing the play, is also playing a strong part, while Christine and Ernest Bodkin are playing important roles, while the cast in the cast are Ann Farrar, James McGrath of "Cotters" fame, George Durham, Harcourt Aubrey, and C. Ridge, who all have excellent parts.

The scene has been specially adapted to the requirements of the play, and there are many weird effects and hair-raising moments, relieved by some screamingly funny interludes. Altogether "The Whispering Gallery" is the finest mystery play offered by the Gordon McLeod Players this season. It will be played for one week only, however popular it may be, as there are other important productions to be offered.

"The reformed churches cannot be said to recognize the pursuit of holiness as an adequate career," Dean Inge.

The Story Behind the Play

By J. J. GELLER

"LA TOSCA" For the greater part of a half century, Victorien Sardou was acclaimed the uncrowned king of French playwrights. The mere announcement of a premiere of a new play written by Sardou turned the opening night into a theatrical event in Paris which the literateurs, critics, journalists, boulevardiers and high public officials sought eagerly to attend.

His plays were always peopled with prominent stage celebrities. The famous Sarah Bernhardt frequently looked to Sardou for a starring vehicle and he always arose to the occasion. The theatrical records reveal nearly a score of successful dramas which he wrote for her. He was a skilled technician in the art of showmanship and could squeeze the last ounce of drama out of any ordinary incident. He was also adept in contriving the most ingenious situations and make them pass for great drama. Hence, while there were some who readily accepted him in the ranks of great dramatists, others remained hostile to his ideas.

NINA CAVALIERI As Tosca

Sardou was constantly in search of themes. His "La Tosca" is said to have its origin in an incident which actually occurred in Rome during 1800 and it served as a convenient peg on which to hang a four-act play for Sarah Bernhardt. The plot exposes the duplicity of Scarpia, Chief of Police in Rome, who uses his authority as a cloak to cover up worse crimes than those he must stamp out.

"La Tosca" opened at the Porte Saint-Martin Theatre on November 24, 1887, and proved to be the most emotional of all Sardou's dramas. As usual, it divided the critics. Regardless of this cleavage among the critical gentry, the public paid handsomely to see the Sardou play which starred the Divine Sarah in the leading role. She appeared to great advantage in the role of La Tosca and added this play to her repertoire. Upon one of her periodic trips to Italy, some ten years later, she revived this gripping drama. It was attended by Giacomo Puccini, who had just come into his own with his fourth opera, "La Boheme."

In "La Tosca," Puccini saw the basis for a fifth opera to sustain his reputation. He thereupon arranged with Sardou to take this Italian story and convert it into a grand opera under the same title. To do this he employed two librettists to fashion to text while he himself became responsible for the score. Upon its completion he wisely engineered its premiere at the Constantin Theatre in Rome, the city which originally furnished the incidents and characters in the plot. It met with the approval of the Italians, who considered it another link in the long chain of successful melodramatic grand opera credited to their countrymen.

Apart from its tragic plot, the music of "La Tosca" is powerful and sincere, and denotes the work of a master hand of melody. The same year it was seen in Rome it was likewise produced in London at the Covent Garden by a company which later visited the United States. Recently the highlights of this opera was broadcast for the first time in the United States with four internationally-known operatic singers.

Gloria Swanson Stirs Hearts in "What a Widow"

By MOLLIE MERRICK (Special Dispatch to The Colonist and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 29.—They're calling her picture "What a Widow!" and they're saying about her, "What a Girl!"

She gets what she wants. And she goes after it with both hands. Gloria Swanson has had unique and far-reaching cinema experience, and she's just beginning to scratch the glory field in talkie pictures.

Vincent Youmans writes his first music to order for her next picture. Stage hits of this composer have been used in other talkie ventures, but this is his initial venture in a purely cinema way.

She has some music of Lehar tucked away in Vienna—freshly written for the picture after it was made. Things are coming along in a gentle, sure fashion for the lady who seemed to have suffered an eclipse a little while back.

James Gleason is writing her dialogue, and if you know what that means, either Hollywood or Manhattan, it's a sign it will be good. Mack Sennett once said, "She's not that good for custard pie comedies, but there's a real awakening of curves, and that girl is going somewhere."

That girl did it.

WELSH IMPERIAL SINGERS COMING

Will Appear at Auditorium Tomorrow and Tuesday in Attractive Programmes

The Welsh Imperial Singers, who will appear at the Shrine Auditorium on Monday and Tuesday of this week, won such extraordinary success recently in Europe as to warrant an extended tour in Canada for this season. They have been booked in all the large cities and, as a result of these successes, a real awakening of part-song singing in this country is predicted. Their work is such that it becomes a thing of sheer delight, while the special charm lies in the wonderful sympathy and enthusiasm radiated by this choir.

Following the practice in visiting all large centres, a special programme will be given to students on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

A man in Indiana, returning home after thirty-two years' absence, has been told by the courts that he is legally dead, and his status is that of a ghost. He means to haunt the courts till he gets justice.

DRAMA OF SOCIAL LIFE ENTERTAINS

"The Dollar Mark" Is Presentation of Toby Leitch Players at Variety

"The Dollar Mark—The Wall Street Crash." That is the quite intriguing title of the absorbing comedy-drama the popular Toby Leitch Players will produce at the Variety Theatre all this week.

Dramatic in the extreme, replete with exciting situations, and as full of laughter as Wall Street is of guile, this brilliant play has scored a triumphant hit wherever it has been produced.

It takes you behind the scenes in the lives of captains of finance. It portrays the crisis that looms above a powerful New York bank as a result of speculation that threatens the president and his son with disgrace and imprisonment.

Allen Crane, rich young financier of New York, has married Leah Potter, a lovely girl with the simple, frank, sincere ways of a girl of the great out-of-doors. Dick Crane, bank president and powerful financier, disapproves of his untutored daughter-in-law. She is beautiful and charming, no doubt, but she lacks the polished manners of smart New York society.

When Leah's mother and brother, Toby, arrive from Arizona to pay her a visit, Dick Crane and Allen both snub the Trotters. Arizona copper has made the Trotters fabulously wealthy, but has not succeeded in imparting any of the social graces the Cranes seem to find so essential in life.

But the ironic part of it is that, as a result of Dick Crane's shady speculation, the Crane bank and the Crane fortune are wavering on the very brink of disaster, and the unscrupulous Dick declares that the only way out of his predicament is to borrow money from the people he so heartily despises. He lays his plans with subtle cunning. News of his shady speculation leaks out. A run on the Crane bank is fraught with seeds of ruin. Will Leah rescue the Cranes—whose snubs, both to herself and her family, are rankling bitterly? See this remarkably dramatic play. It holds a wealth of interest.

Test Is Offered For Dodging Cars

LONDON, March 29.—If you can do all of the things listed below you probably have a fifty-fifty chance of crossing Piccadilly Circus here or St. James Street, Montreal, without getting hit by an automobile.

Scientists of the British Industrial Health Research Board believe the tests which they have designed actually measure the factor of accident proneness. They ask you to:

1. Do a series of small circles at an increasing speed.
2. Follow the irregular movements of a mechanically controlled pointer.
3. Keep a green disc controlled by two hands above a white moving disc.
4. Keep a stylus with a ball on the end inside a small metal cup without touching the sides, the cup being moved in an irregular way.
5. Form a rectangle out of four pieces of differently-shaped metal.
6. Fit strips of metal of varying length into a frame.
7. Build a cube from twenty-seven bricks so that each side of the cube is of different color.

BRITISH APIARIST PRAISES WORK

Beekkeeping Activity in British Columbia Is Commended by Old Country Correspondent

What the Province of British Columbia is accomplishing in the line of apiculture work is appreciated not only in the province, but outside of British Columbia. A letter received by Mr. W. J. Sheppard, who is in charge of the section of the Department of Agriculture having to do with beekkeeping, has received an interesting letter from England, which contains praise for the work done locally.

The letter to Mr. Sheppard comes from Mr. C. Hogan, Peyton House, Boxford, Colechester, England, and explains itself. It reads as follows: "I wish to thank you very much for your kindness in forwarding a copy of your bulletin on 'Beekkeeping in B.C.' It is a splendid publication, and I have been so much interested that I have forwarded it to the secretary of the Ministry of Agriculture at Whitehall in the hope that something similar may be published by his department and some mode of demonstration apiculture established along similar lines in this country."

"The bulletin came at an opportune time, as I had just received a questionnaire from the department, asking for opinions on the subject of grading English honey under the 'National Mark' scheme, so that it appears the Government is considering the advisability of helping beekkeeping here."

"Jack and Ethyl" are married, but not to each other. "Jack," Ted Maxwell is married to Bobbe Dean, while "Ethyl," Bernice Berlin, is the wife of Attorney B. A. Berlin.

"Condemned" Is Remarkable Film Of Strange Living

Study of Devil's Island, French Guiana. Made With View to Ascertain Horrors Encountered in Jungles and Shark-Infested Seas, and Presented at Dominion With Ronald Colman Starring

French Penal Colony Is Dramatically Portrayed

A STORY of years of preparation lies behind "Condemned," the new Ronald Colman starring picture which Samuel Goldwyn brings to the Dominion Theatre tomorrow. At least three of the people concerned with its production—Mr. Goldwyn himself—Mrs. Blair Niles, author of "Condemned to Devil's Island," the book from which it was adapted—and Wesley Ruggles, director of the picture—had at different times become attracted to the picture sequences and drama of the famous French penal colonies off the South American coast and determined to use them for these unique values, long before "Condemned" ever came into actual being.

The group of prisoners known as "Devil's Island," where incorrigible French convicts are sent to what is the equivalent of living death, hemmed in by shark-infested seas and fevered jungles, have been famous the world over ever since Captain Alfred Dreyfus, the centre of the great French scandal thirty years ago, was confined there. They came again into world-wide notice some time ago when Eddie Guerin, noted international criminal, escaped from the island, the first man ever to get away alive from the perils of the swamps and jungles.

Three years ago, Mr. Goldwyn became interested in the dramatic aspects of this grim prison colony and planned to utilize it as the setting for a master romance in picture form. At about the same time, Blair Niles, the woman journalist whose studies of conditions and peoples have made her one of the best known figures in literature, was planning a six months' stay on Devil's Island for the purpose of writing a book about it.

She obtained permission from the French Government to make this visit, permission which had never been granted before to any writer or investigator, and found that conditions there were even more startling than she had been led to believe.

"Condemned to Devil's Island," the book resulting from her expedition, became a best seller overnight—the true story of the life of a young French professional thief on the island of living death. Wesley Ruggles, noted moving picture director, read the book and became convinced of its picture possibilities, not knowing of the plans Mr. Goldwyn was already forming.

SOVIET FEAR OF WAR IS SHOWN IN NEW HOMES

MOSCOW, March 29.—Subterranean shelters against gas attacks are included in new model communal dwellings now building in Moscow.

Soviet authorities are taking no stock in the peaceful aims of foreign powers, expressed by disarmament conferences and peace campaigns, and they intend to equip the population against all forms of chemical warfare.

The first of these model communal houses will cost $1,000,000 and will house 1,200 workers. It will contain a clubroom, library, restaurant, kindergarten, stage, nursery, mechanical laundry, grocery, dry goods and other stores.

A model communal dwelling on an even more pretentious scale, to cost $1,500,000 will be built especially for 2,000 students in Moscow. Here, as in other dwellings, there will be no private living rooms, and all necessities of life will be communal. Personal property will be limited to clothing and small articles.

Getting married cautiously is no safer than being a cautious automobile in a swarm of traffic.—Rupert Hughes.

"Show Must Go On" Says Actor

MR. EDMUND ABBEY
Fighting through death and suffering the tradition of the theatre, that "the show must go on," Mr. Edmund Abbey, long a beloved favorite of theatre audiences all over North America, collapsed as the close of the night performance on March 27. Still in costume and make-up, he was removed to his home, where he died. He was a graduate of Upper Canada College and the University of Toronto. Recently he had been seen in his acceptance of the role of "Blahutsky" in a New York production.

MURRAY FEARS FOR LOST VOICE

Baritone Is Handicapped When Fog Settles Down on "Movie" Production

By MOLLIE MERRICK
(Special Dispatch to The Colonist and the North American Newspaper Alliance)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 29.—Picture making is a strenuous game. J. Harold Murray can testify to that. The handsome singer, who has been in talks in one of the triumphs of legitimate talent in this village, is today fighting to regain what threatens to be a lost voice.

Murray's role in the picture called for some out-door work; in the fog. When a picture starts there is no thinking. The entire crew, director, camera men, actors, carry through until it is finished. It was strenuous work and he is pretty hard.

But the singer's sensitive throat came in for the most severe punishment. According to well-defined reports his medical advisers are concerned at the outlook—it may be a hard fight to win back the beautiful baritone which has supplemented this attractive personality.

Murray came to pictures after a successful career on the legitimate stage. He was leading man in "Rio Rita" when the Ziegfeld show was one of the hits of New York. He is one of the few blonde stars in favor of day—the majority of idols being of the brunette order.

And Adolphe Menjou is back in cinemaland with the intention of remaining, it would seem. No visit, this, but a homecoming, which shows how far talks have moved since that first feeble attempt which left the public wondering if such a horrible invention could possibly survive.

Menjou, with his command of languages, is more of an asset to the studios than he was in the days when his work was confined to pantomime. Then, however, his physical characteristics limited him to a routine. In his silent days Menjou climbed to a high place in the salary list. Seventy-five thousand the picture is a goodly sum for a gentleman strictly village-made.

But the village idlers were not down in a body to welcome the return of an idol of the silent screen. They were en masse at the station this morning—Mayor, civic leaders, and brass band—to give the keys of the city to Leo, the cinema lion, who had returned from a personal appearance tour of America.

Three years ago Jack Oakie came to Hollywood and worked as a comedian. Today he is one of the few personalities acknowledged an infallible box-office attraction. Women and children fall for him—he is a knock-out with the male portion of the audience—and producers have fallen into the habit of fighting over him.

Effort Will Be Made at Playhouse to Eliminate Low Drumming Sound in Talks

In an effort to render still greater perfection of sound production, the management of the Playhouse Theatre is making a new improvement, to commence operation tomorrow, with the showing of the all-talking, singing picture, "Song of Love." This new equipment, namely, the "Selector of Audible Frequencies," has a remarkable effect upon the modern production. It is a recognized fact that unvoiced sounds, such as p, k, t, f, s, ch, th, and so on, have a hissing, frictional nature, due to their being made by forcing the breath against the teeth, lips and tongue, the majority being high pitched, and of a far higher frequency. These unvoiced sounds are absolutely necessary for clear pronunciation and distinct diction. Frequency in production may be simply described as follows: What sense of human ear to be the note of a certain pitch is in reality a complex series of vibrations transmitted through the air to the ear-drum. The vibrations can actually be seen photographed on the sound track of a talking film; they can be felt by placing the hand on the diaphragm of a loudspeaker.

A low note causes a slow vibration while a high note is correspondingly faster. They range from roughly twenty per second to as high as 20,000 per second. The ear best records those of about 550 to 4,000 per second. It is recorded that lower notes have a smacking effect upon high frequency sounds. All this naturally has a far-reaching effect upon studio production, and this has been the subject to which engineers have turned their attention with the result of the achievement of the Selector of Audible Frequencies. The effect will be elimination of the low drumming sound which has previously muffled and hindered clarity in screen enunciation.

JANET GAYNOR HAS HER CHANCE

Great Opportunity Is Given to Show Ability as Emotional Actress at Columbia

When Janet Gaynor was a little girl, and used to play "show" to amuse herself and her parents, she dreamed (very secretly of course) of the time when she would grow up and join a ballet show and wear a fluffy, airy costume like the graceful toe dancers she saw on the stage.

Then, when she did grow up, she entered pictures and became, overnight, one of the sensations of the year. Now, in "Street Angel," the feature production, showing for three days at the Columbia, she got her wish and wore dainty ballet costumes such as would bring envy to the heart of many a ballet dancer.

One is a filmy black affair made with a light bodice of satin, trimmed with tiny boxes of silver ribbon, and a flange of silver-edged black net ruffles, and a many-tiered skirt of tiny black net ruffles, edged with silver, through which she wears a shoulder cape of black and silver lace.

The other is a dainty creation in pink and white, the bodice of pink satin trimmed, with a yoke of silver lace and skirt of pink maribou joined with silver insertion. A long cape of flesh georgette, spangled all over with tiny silver shells and collared with a wide band of maribou, completes the costume.

"Street Angel" is based on a play by Monckton Hoffe and was made under the direction of Frank Borzage. In it Janet starts as a poor little Neapolitan girl, blossoms into the star of the limous and then goes back to her original state. It is a splendid chance to show her as a girl, and a ready actress, and an interpreter of character. Charles Farrell is co-featured with her in the production.

Kimberley; World's Jewel Casket

South Africa's Diamond City

On the edge of the veldt, about 600 miles north of Capetown, is the city of Kimberley, famous for its diamond deposits, which have made the town wealthy since the discovery of the precious stones in 1870. It has a history, the like of which may never be written again, for in the rush to get the diamonds there has been intrigue, romance and, according to some of the wealthy diamond seekers, was the indirect cause of the Boer War.

BARNATO AND RHODES

A romantic figure in the diamond fields in the early days was the late Barney Barnato, who amassed a fortune in Kimberley and died by his own hand during a voyage to England. Opposed to him in the district was that greatest of South Africans, Cecil Rhodes, whose name is one to conjure with on the Dark Continent. However, after a time the interests of the two leading lights on the diamond fields were merged. The new company being called the De Beers Consolidated Mining Company. From that time on the De Beers Company has dominated the diamond market of the world, and probably will continue to do so for years to come. The only interest in Kimberley in the diamond industry, there being nothing else to warrant the existence of the town. Everybody in Kimberley gets his or her living directly or indirectly through the De Beers Company. The electric power and the street cars, with other utilities, are owned by the company, while most of the real estate for miles around belongs to the De Beers Company.

PROSPECTING IN OLD HOUSES

When an old building is pulled down in Kimberley, parties get the rights to prospect in the debris, and diamonds are invariably found. In many of the old houses in the early days mud bricks were used and these latter often furnish a profitable result to searchers, often making one financially comfortable for life. It is quite common for residents to search in their backyards for the precious stones, though there is an unwritten law that every diamond found in the Kimberley district is the property of the De Beers Company. On presentation at the company's offices of any diamonds thus found, one-third of the value of such stones is given to the finder and the rest becomes the property of the said company. However, that is a very well in theory, but in practice there is no doubt that many of the diamonds find their way into private pockets, nothing being said about it. The De Beers Company maintains, in partnership with the Government, a diamond detective force. These men watch every train that arrives or leaves the confines of Kimberley. Even visitors to the various mines are shadowed by detectives. When viewing the thousands of dollars' worth of gems, visitors are watched by several pairs of eyes from different points of vantage. When it is understood that a flatful of diamonds is worth over $100,000, the authorities can hardly be blamed for keeping close tabs on every visitor. At one time it was possible for tourists to handle the precious stones, but this privilege has since been withheld.

GLUT IN DIAMONDS

At present there is a glut in the diamond business, owing to the discovery of diamonds in the alluvial diggings at Lichtenburg, in the Transvaal, and in the former German Southwest Africa. Some of these diggings are being operated by the Government. The De Beers Company has had to build a reserve and, as withholding diamonds worth millions from the market in order to stabilize the price of the stones. The Wall Street scare last October had a detrimental effect on the diamond industry, for America is the best customer of Kimberley. If business is good in the United States then all is well with the De Beers Company. Being a luxury, diamonds are in poor demand during times of financial stress. Recently numbers of men were placed on half time at the diamond mines but full time is again the order of the day.

NATIVE LABOR

A feature of the diamond fields is the colored labor question. Thousands of natives of various South African tribes, mainly Basutos, are hired under contract for four months, during which time they are not allowed out of the compounds, huge barrack-like buildings, sheltering many hundreds of men. The natives proceed to the mines through turnstiles which click off the number as each worker passes through an underground passage to the mines. This has become necessary owing to the theft of diamonds, sometimes the natives being in league with white men on the outside. Three days before the expiration of the contract term the natives are isolated and thoroughly searched for gems, every part of their anatomy being explored. The X-ray is also used for detecting hidden diamonds. The natives have been known to cut themselves and bury the diamonds in the flesh. In fact, all sorts of tricks have been resorted to in the effort to smuggle diamonds out of the compounds.

Some of the natives re-engage after their contracts expire, there being one fellow who has never been outside of the compound for ten years owing to a fondness for gambling. At the end of each period this particular native finds himself broke, cheerfully signing on for another season at the mines. The men are well treated by the De Beers Company, and on the whole are more cheerful than the natives on the outside, at the moment of their departure, take six months' leave of work, and repair to the native kraals for a big jamboree with men and women.

SEEM INEXHAUSTIBLE

No matter how the rise and fall of the financial mercury may be reflected in the buying of diamonds, Kimberley, like a bull, remains ever full. Its mines seem to dry exhaustion. Since the diamond rush one day back in 1870, which brought a horde of fortune hunters from all parts of the land, Kimberley's deposits have kept the city in affluence all these years. And if the day ever comes when the mines are done, then it will be all over for this town, as there is no farm land in the vicinity to justify its existence further. Kimberley lives on the diamond fields, and without the traction it would soon be like one of the buried cities of old.

THE OPEN MINE

There is no more spectacular feature of the diamond fields than the "Open Mine," surely one of the biggest man-made holes in the world. The great yawning abyss represented by years of digging reminds one of a huge Niagara without the water. It is one of the greatest thrills in Africa, a land of many thrills. As the sunshine plays on the great hole, with large birds flying around it in circles, it offers one of the wildest sights to be seen anywhere in the universe. The problem of taking a photograph of the "Open Mine" is extremely difficult. The proportions are so immense and the bottom so black from the observation points that it is hard to do justice to the gigantic hole in a picture.

A UNIQUE CITY

In some ways Kimberley is without an equal. It is not a usual thing to walk into a town and realize that underneath any square foot there is enough wealth, which, if repelling in a vast picket, would assure the average individual of comfort for life. There has been taken from one mine in particular enough wealth to liquidate the debt of some nations. Now deserted and silent, as if aware of the tragedies endured in its history, it remains one of the most impressive sights. The great dumps seen from the train are eloquent of the work done in the past years, but when the wind is blowing these giant hills are the cause of much discomfort to the people of Kimberley. Printed on many topographical maps is the "Open Mine" remains the most impressive of the sights of the diamond city—one of the most interesting places in all Africa.

Susan Was Silent

LONDON, March 30.—The spirit of comradeship among local members of Parliament was demonstrated in the House of Commons recently. While Andrew MacLaren, member for Stoke-on-Trent, was speaking on a resolution, Miss Susan Lawrence was chatting on the Treasury Bench. MacLaren broke off his speech and exclaimed: "Susan, will you be quiet a minute?" Susan accepted the rebuke, bowed and kept quiet during the remainder of the speech. Miss Lawrence is not the first woman M.P. to be called by her christian name, as Lady Astor has often been addressed as "Nancy" when a friendly rebuke has been directed at her across the house.

SPRING FLOWERS GETTING CHEAPER

Stallholders at Public Market Had Fine Displays of Daffodils and Tulips Yesterday

The heavy rains of the early part of the week, followed by several days of bright warm sunshine, helped to provide large displays of outdoor grown daffodils for yesterday's public market, and resulted in a considerable reduction in flower prices. Competing with the outdoor blooms were the last of the hot-house grown daffodils, and as the growers were eager to dispose of them, customers got the benefit of the situation, buying freely. Cut tulips were displayed in fine condition, and were slightly cheaper than a week ago. Sweet peas were on sale at several stalls, and a good variety of potted plants in bloom were offered, among them a number of flowering shrubs, and a good variety of local growing of the bulb, had a number of chionodoxas, attractive looking plant with a delicate and shaded blue flower. A number of stalks displayed green lettuce, and one had new spinach, spring onions, radishes, parsley and cress. Meat, fish and egg prices were the same as a week ago.

Individuality Becomes Important Factor in Home Decoration

By MARGARET C. MACLURE

By MARGARET MACLURE
The manner in which we decorate our persons or our houses is said to be one of the most self-revealing acts of which man is capable. Taste in decoration is inevitably the outcome of one's character and intelligence, so each house is, or should be, the natural expression of an individual's idea of functional fitness joined to a sense of beauty.

"Have nothing in your house that you do not know to be useful or believe to be beautiful," said William Morris in his "Lectures on Art," published in 1890. Incidentally one cannot help wondering what would happen to the great mass of modern wedding presents if we carried out the rule.

However, in proof of the fact that artistic merit has nothing whatever to do with fashion, there is something that is closely akin to William Morris' ideal in the world of modern decoration, because it aims to teach us a greater simplicity and lays much stress upon "fitness for purpose." Simple, as he means it, should consist in an absence of rubbish, but must not be confused with bareness or a diminution of comfort. The littering of any room with all sorts of unrelated objects will invariably create a feeling of unrest and destroy any sense of individuality. This in no way applies to the art collector or the art collector of antiques whose rooms are generally an expression of his taste in combining things with different meanings harmoniously. Such places are usually redolent of personality and form a fitting background for it.

BUYING WITHOUT JUDGMENT
The coldest and most impersonal rooms are often those where much money has been spent by the owner in buying without judgment. He probably believes that art objects placed anywhere or in any relation to each other must be decorative. Such a mistake! Because the very fact of using too many decorative things prevents any one of the objects from having a decorative effect. Sometimes one sees places that are otherwise very beautiful, quite spoiled by such clutter. On the other hand there are delightful rooms where one feels a sense of pleasure immediately on entering because of that intangible something which tells us a little about the tastes and ideals of their owner. Books and fires and flowers and elements of decoration that go a long way towards making rooms become alive.

I remember a certain library with blue hangings, brown carpet and black furniture that always looked rather dull but which lightened up marvellously by the introduction of an orange bowl of nasturtiums, or a mass of marigolds.

BOOKSHELVES
In any room books are pleasant things to see and to have at hand, but it is important to remember that bookshelves should always form a distinct architectural feature and the cases must be placed with as much thought for their balance as if they were windows or the fireplace itself. Never put your books behind glass doors, it destroys entirely that sense of intimate contact, and also takes away from their decorative color value. A wall lined with bookshelves or book-filled niches on either side of the hearth gives comfort, character and personality to the large living-room.

Another very important thing—the personal touch is shown, or should be, in the smaller articles in the room which, by their choice, go far towards indicating the character of the owner—just as the old saying holds good that in dress a man or woman may be known by shoes, hats and gloves, so our personalities will be indicated by the decorative accessories with which we surround ourselves.

Most important of all is the fact that your house should express yourself and be in harmony with your life work, whether you happen to be a musician, an artist, a seamstress or an author.

How to Make Those Stiff Creaky Joints Young Again

Sandy walks slowly up the stairs—his knee joints creak—"getting along in years," he sighs, "and that that attack of rheumatism didn't do them any good—these old knee joints need oiling up."

Millions of men and women are like Sandy—their creaky joints need oiling—need something to make them work with the smoothness of youth—how to oil them need no longer be a problem.

Right here in Canada today there is being made and sold through drug stores a soothing, penetrating emollient called Joint-Ease that is made for just one purpose—to bring comfort to stiff, inflamed, creaky, ailing joints.

Just rub Joint-Ease tonight on that troublesome joint and swiftly it goes through skin and flesh right down to the tendons and ligaments of the joints—right where all the pain and distress starts.

Joint-Ease works swiftly—its job is to lubricate up stiff, creaky joints, reduce the swelling and subdue the inflammation, and it does the job quickly, thoroughly and well.

Ask any druggist anywhere for a generous tube of Joint-Ease—the price is 60 cents and bear this in mind—Joint-Ease is guaranteed—when Joint-Ease gets in, joint agony gets out—quick or money back.

"Gypping" the Brokers

An Admittedly Biased Story by a Broker

(From Toronto Saturday Night)

In publishing the following article, written by a prominent stockbroker, the editor does not wish it to be thought that Saturday Night is in any way defending the irregularities in broker's practice that have recently been the subject of Government action. The article is published in order to give "the other side" a chance to state its case, and because of particular interest to readers at this time.

Lambasting the brokers has developed into the premier indoor sport. The winter golf season has suffered immeasurably and we fear for the fate of many clubs during the coming Summer if something is not attempted to counteract the injury done.

Perhaps a biased story lambasting clients from the brokers' viewpoint would prove the antidote. For those not concerned with the fate of the grand stand, they greet one another, dealing with the mental attitude of some clients towards their brokers may bring some realization that the brokerage business, though popularly and widely proscribed, is pretty much dictated by the whims of the public.

Much has been printed about brokers gypping clients. One never reads about clients gypping brokers, and yet this is widely practiced. Margin houses experience it a great deal more than do strictly commission houses dealing for cash only. Of late, it has come to be a chronic state. The brickbats hurled are not being confined to words. A good many legal ones are being found with regularity among the debris deposited on the brokers' doorsteps.

This has set up a new morning salutation among brokers. "Good morning," they greet one another, "have you got your new 'black-mail' suit this morning?" Thus have they come to playfully refer to the deluge of actions launched to recover money lost by clients in speculation, and who are in parlance of the street "are now squealing."

"It is an ill wind," etc., soliloquizes the lawyer as he draws a mental picture of his fees when he finally cleans the slate of the last of these suits for his broker client.

As this is a biased article, let us deal with one thought about the brokerage business in general before picturing some of the shortcomings of friend client. Few realize that the broker is not the manager of his own business to the same extent as is the manufacturer. It is perhaps true that the success of both is subject to the public attitude and whims, but in the case of the manufacturer it takes public opinion and action a considerable time to effectively influence his business, one way or the other. With the broker, it can be done in a day because so many factors over which he has no control are dominant and real in the day-to-day business of a stock which today looks to have all the elements of a good purchase may be the subject of overnight news and sometimes even rumors that will change its whole aspect from a speculative or investment point of view.

The broker very seldom gets credit for anything and gets a great deal of blame. If clients make money the majority of them want the glory for themselves. They want everyone to know that they are clever, and while not deliberately lying, give out impressions that they are of the chosen few in a position to get inside information. If they lose, they never forget to blame the broker for losing their money. If the broker gives advice and the client loses money, the broker loses a client and makes an enemy.

When a client asks for any information or advice, he wants to be told what he wishes to believe. If the broker discourages him from buying some stock he has been sold about, and if it goes up a few points, he will broadcast to his friends how much money he would have made but for the advice he received from a broker.

The average speculator thinks he wants to make money, but what he is really seeking is the excitement and thrills of speculation. When an experienced broker is in the midst of a boiling bull market, he knows his clients should be selling and taking in some profit. He also knows that should he advise them to sell or insist on them selling, the majority of them would take their accounts out of the office and go to another broker, who would allow them to gamble at will and according to their own ideas and methods.

The average speculator will forgive a broker when he has lost money on the broker's advice to buy, but he will never forgive a broker if the latter has told him to sell, and his stock advances.

Again, the average speculator wants to buy on a thin margin as possible, and will not only use all arguments to get a broker to carry him without margin, but will create a scene if the broker sells him out to protect his own interests. Lots of margin traders seem to think that it is the duty of the broker to carry under-margined accounts if in his opinion the set-back is only a temporary one. The margin trader has his own salvation in his own hands. He must cut his cloth according to his cloth and must not overbuy, which is the cause of all kinds of trouble with margin traders, who sometimes forget that they must not overdraw from their brokers any more than they could expect to overdraw without authority from their banks.

During a market slump margin clients will even hide, not answer telephones, stay away from home so as not to receive their mail, in order to have some legal excuse for the broker not selling them out.

Speculators usually look on the margin clerk in the brokerage office as the greatest enemy. A strict margin clerk in the greatest safeguard against the weakness of all speculators to over-speculate. If he promptly sells them out when their stock becomes under-margined he limits their losses.

General experience shows that men are better losers than women. Both generally, if they have experienced losses, tell their families and friends that the broker was to blame, whereas invariably the losses are due to their own mistakes and ignorance.

It is human nature that someone else should be responsible, but you

2. Don't be too eager to spend your money—investigate first.
3. Advise the high-pressure man to move along. Good propositions do not have to get capital through a Select a reliable broker, but illegitimate means.
4. Don't expect him to be a magician. Use your brains, but don't buy or sell on every tip given you—first ascertain the facts.
5. Don't buy on margin without sufficient funds in the bank to protect your stock if the market falls.

In concluding, it might be well to point out here that speculators are only a small percentage of the general public, and poor losers only a small percentage of the speculators. —Toronto Saturday Night

THEATRE NEEDS HELP OF WEALTH

British Companies Will Cease to Visit Canada Otherwise, Popular Actor Prophesies

Unless some group of millionaires, service clubs and independent local organizations get together and undertake to guarantee companies coming to this country from England, there is every probability that this source of theatrical entertainment will be entirely lost to Canada within the next season or two.

Mr. Gordon McLeod, of the Gordon McLeod English Players, in discussing problems theatrical at a meeting of the University Women's Club last evening, proffered this as the only suggestion he had for meeting the conditions pertaining today, and which were tending to discourage British companies from venturing on a Canadian tour. But he indicated, also, a number of other matters which, from the producers' and actors' standpoint, were open to improvement. The theatres were often too large and by comparison with the luxuriously appointed motion picture palaces, lacking in comfort and attractiveness. The ideal theatre should not be a place where the most money was made, but a place where the most people were entertained. In this connection he cited as the ideal in this country the Royal Alexandra Theatre in Toronto, and, as regards stage-lighting, the Princess Theatre, Toronto, although this suffered from "sound pits". The average Canadian theatre was badly lighted, the seats uncomfortably near together, the heating uncertain, the general surroundings unattractive and gloomy, the orchestra often indifferent. Little wonder that the would-be patron sought the movie palace instead, where he could get physical as well as mental relaxation.

Last evening's gathering took the form of an unconventional round-table discussion, followed by an informal reception at which other members of Mr. McLeod's company were present at the close of the performance of "Tell Me the Truth" at the Royal Victoria Theatre. Mr. McLeod thought the Little Theatre movement had helped the commercial theatre very little. On the contrary it had been his experience on occasion that an amateur production had not infrequently interfered with attendance at professional productions visiting a city about the same time or shortly afterwards. Interested in their own rehearsals or performances, people would not divide their attention by patronizing a visiting company. Sometimes a professional company arrived in a town where the same play had been given shortly before by amateurs, only to discover that people did not want to see the play again.

Another matter open to remedy was the habit of booking different companies close on each other's heels. This had its serious disadvantage, people often not having the money to spend on theatres six or seven weeks in unbroken succession. Occasionally it had been his experience in some Canadian towns that the movie theatre had put up a definite competition. Another serious problem to the British touring company in Canada was the trade union difficulty and the heavy expense of stagehands, etc.

"The last year proved a regular debacle so far as British companies visiting Canada were concerned," Mr. McLeod stated. On the other hand even the most astute producers had failed to discover the secret of what the public wanted. A play might be an immense success in one town and a dead failure in a town a few miles further along the line. Even audiences in the same city on succeeding nights would receive a play quite differently. This introduced the question of the advisability of having professional claqueurs, a popular custom in French theatres not many years ago.

Other questions bearing more directly on the drama, "Shakespeare in Modern Dress," the venue of war plays, sex plays, mystery plays, of Shaw, Ibsen and other playwrights, were discussed in an entertaining way before the evening closed.

"Willie," said his mother, "you clothes are wet. You have been in the water again." "Yes, mother," said Willie bravely. "I went in to save Charlie Jones." "My noble darling!" cried his mother. "Did you jump in after him?" "No, mother," replied Willie. "I jumped in first, so as to be there when he fell in."

ANSWER TO YESTERDAY'S PUZZLE

Dr. H. Kline and Lajos Steiner will play two clock games to decide the tie for the championship.

Marshall C.C.—The weekly rapid transit attracted a strong entry, the top scorers being Hanauer, 6½-1½; Erling Tholfsen, 6-2; Ruber, 4½-3½; MacMurray, 3-5.

Game Memories—In the present monetary lull of master games we may indulge in memory of the past. What is sweeter to us than recollection of the famous tournament at Hastings in 1066 when the youthful Pillsbury electrified America with his amazing victory over the chess pallidians of that period—Lasker, Steinitz, Tarrasch, Teichgrin? True, he lost to Lasker, but his final triumph in winning the tournament over such super-masters was his leap to fame—a fame he maintained and which left an everlasting fragrance with his tragic passing eleven years later. He won great games thereafter, and his imaginative style of chess measured to the romantic like that of Morphy; but it is doubtful if these later games as a whole compare through his fertile brain in this early period of his career, and we see him at his best in this respect in his first international victory.—John F. Barry in The Boston Transcript.

Problems—The London Observer comments on the fiftieth birthday of Alain C. White as follows: "Mr. White is the greatest connoisseur of chess problems, and his analytical collection of several hundred thousand diagrams, now in the hands of Mr. George Hume, is the final court of appeal for all parts of the world. This great patron of the art is also a magnificent composer, with a special aptitude for novel and bizarre ideas. The British Chess Problem Society has marked the occasion of Mr. White's jubilee by a congratulatory letter to his Connecticut home, accompanied by a gold fountain pen and pencil."

Reflections on Statuary—Some Art Treasures—Canada's Artistic Development—The Naval Conference—Empire Free Trade—Bernard Shaw as Pianist—Some New Films.

By ELIZABETH MONTIZAMBERT

LONDON, March 6 (By Mail).—Visitors to Paris have often been intrigued or amused, according to temperament, by the sight of statues erected in honor of men and women whom their compatriots, for one reason or another, had thought fit to deprive of life. The statue of Marshal Ney is an excellent example of this temperamental idiosyncrasy because the statue was erected at the very place where that gallant, but too versatile, soldier was shot. The English may now observe a somewhat similar phenomenon in London, for Mrs. Pankhurst's statue, unveiled today, is within sight of the scenes that evoked the rebuff of her opponents in the suffrage campaign. The statue, carved by A. G. Walker, stands facing the road in Victoria Tower Gardens just below the Houses of Parliament. The unveiling ceremony was simple, but impressive. It was, of course, eminently fitting that Mr. Baldwin, who gave votes to "flappers," should take the chief part in this ceremony. Large crowds assembled, and though the inclusion of music composed by four women composers, Dame Ethel Smythe, Miss Dorothy Howell, Lady Holmes and Amy W. Finden, was, of course, due to the fact that it was the Metropolitan Police Band over which Dame Ethel Smythe, taking one of time's revenges, waved her baton as she conducted the chorale from "The Wreckers."

STATUES TO WOMEN

A writer in The Observer pointed out this week that only fourteen women have had statues erected to them in the City of London, the other thirteen including the Charing Cross memorial to Queen Eleanor, replacing the one destroyed by the Long Parliament. Queen Elizabeth added the vestry door of St. Dunstan's in the West, Bodleian, Queen Charlotte, Queen Anne, Queen Victoria and Queen Alexandra, Mrs. Siddons, Florence Nightingale, Nurse Cavell, Margaret MacDonald and Dr. Aldrich Blake. The writer omits to mention the fountain erected to Lady Henry Somerset, the temperance advocate, which adds to the gallery of the Embankment Gardens with its inscription, "I was thirsty and ye gave me to drink."

THE LONDON THEATRE

It is difficult to write about anything which has moved one so deeply as "Charles and Mary," the play about Charles Lamb written by Joan Temple, now being produced at the Globe Theatre. There is almost no plot and no smart sayings if one excepts the gentle wit of Ella's punning jests, but the pathos of his heroism, the fortitude with which he bore the sacrifice of giving up his life to his sister hold the audience more than many a more stirring plot. The play indeed is chiefly noteworthy because it makes one realize again the century-old miracle of the universal affection lavished on the memory of Charles Lamb.

What other author is so sincerely beloved as the writer of "Dream Children?" Mr. Peter Ridge, the actor manager, who plays Charles Lamb, performed a miracle of make-up and impersonation. He was the very embodiment of the Ella of one's imagination. Joan Temple, the authoress, who took the part of Bridget, probably enhanced the charm of that tragic figure and in the death scene in the first act, where, driven to desperation by her inconsiderate family, her brain snaps and she murders her mother, Miss Temple gives the harrowing scene its full poignancy. First produced at the Everyman Theatre and then transferred to the Globe, another home will probably have to be found for "Charles and Mary" when Mr. Maurice Browne opens his management at the Globe with the new play, "B.J.I."

ART TREASURES

But the art treasures that are the talk of the town this week are gathered in the cause of charity at Sir Philip Sassoon's house in Park Lane. The collection is called by the intriguing name of "Conversation Pieces," meaning typically English pictures that portray family life or friendship. This is the third time that Sir Philip Sassoon has taken the trouble to turn his home into exhibition rooms in aid of the Royal Northern Hospital. The last two it will be remembered, exhibited old English embroidery and old English plate. This is the first time that anyone has thought of grouping interesting eighteenth century domestic scenes. They are simply enchanting. There are fifty-seven Zoffany out of a total of some 150 pictures, eighteenth Hogarths, seven Morlands and nine Gainsboroughs, among them the exquisite "Minuet" and the lovely picture of himself and wife and child. There are three adorable animal pictures by Benjamin Marshall; one of them might have inspired Furze, "Diana of the Uplands." Ben Marshall calls his picture "A Young Lady Walking in a landscape with a dog." One of the most entrancing pictures is Copley's "The Sittell Family," lent by Captain Robert Sittell. They are grouped in a charming room at number 4 Audley Square. Besides the actual beauty of the pictures is the interest attached to familiar backgrounds; through a window in the Sittell picture one can see Hyde Park. "The Sharp Family" by Zoffany shows a view of Fulham, a picture of members of the Wellesley family shows Strathfieldsaye, the picture presented to the Duke of Wellington, and there are glimpses of Chelsea and the Green Park, the latter very disillusioning, for it shows Rosamund's Pond as a tank looking like a reservoir.

BERNARD SHAW PLAYS

The Old Vic proves its eternal youth this week by a new departure, for it has put on two Bernard Shaw plays, "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets" as a curtain raiser, and "Androcles and the Lion." They are both excellently produced. Maritza Hunt makes an admirable Queen Elizabeth, though she will never compare with Haidee Wright's inimitable performance in "Will Shakespeare." Adele Dixon was a very attractive "Dark Lady," and Harcourt Williams, not quite so happy as Will Shakespeare, though he made his plea for a national theatre with appropriate zest.

"Androcles and the Lion," that adorable patchwork play which englobes religion and farce without making either seem incongruous, was appreciated by the usual packed audience that I have never failed to find at the Old Vic. It is true that there were painful moments when the audience, unaccustomed to Shaw's brilliant fireworks, laughed in the wrong place when they mistook tragedy for comedy, but that was merely because the one trod so closely on the heels of the other. Mr. Shaw in an interesting letter to Miss Baylis, reminded her that he made his debut at the Old Vic fifty years ago as a stop-gap pianist at performances of "Faust" and "Il Trovatore."

The new films produced by the Gaumont Company are a welcome variety from the ultra-American plot and dialogue that keep so many people away from the films. "Pelix, the Cat," has added talking to his other accomplishments. His weird and grotesque sounds make him more absurd than ever, and the fun of his adventures rises on at a swift pace. The colored films are really beautiful. The exquisite lovely child employed in the toy shop and "The Enchanted Forest" will probably become as famous as Jackie Coogan. These clever films, with their wonderful atmosphere and perfection of detail sometimes betray curious lapses as, for instance, when they show perfectly turned-out women in evening dress wandering about primeval forests without a hair out of place.

TECHNICAL MARVEL

"The lost Zeppelin," a Gaumont-Tiffany all-dialogue production shows Conway Tearle as Commander Hall, Virginia Valli as his wife, and Ricardo Cortes as Lieutenant Armstrong in the throes of a drama created by Commander Hall's discovery that his wife was in love with his lieutenant on the eve of their departure on a Polar expedition. The technical achievement, especially where the airship goes through an awful snowstorm and falling among icebergs, is quite marvelous. The voices, of course, strike the English ear as commonplace.

The conversion of John is Bretton's famous comedy, "A Sister to Assist" into the film, gives Barbara Gott and Polly Emery another chance to show their inimitable spirit of comedy. Everybody who liked the play will like the film, the whole show is refreshingly British.

Hamlet Garland, one of the most distinguished members of the American Academy, was praising New York.

"But, of course," he ended, "New York isn't as great as she says she is. The New York papers give New York 101 per cent perfection. Well, that's going too far."

"There's a story about a colored professor who gave a student a mark of 101 per cent in an examination. The president of the college asked about it afterwards."

"Lookabare, Brother Flapp," he said, "our perfection mark been 100 per cent, what basis does you base your marks on?"

"On de 100 per cent basis, of coase," said Professor Flapp.

"How come, then professor, that you gives this here student 101 per cent?"

"He done answered," said Professor Flapp, "one extra question what we didn't ask him."

"Any insanity in the family?" asked the insurance doctor of Mrs. Suffragist.

"Well no—only my husband imagines he is the head of the house."
